PETROGRAD, March 23.—With the great Galician fortress of Przemysl in Russian hands, the Russian army which captured this stronghold after a siege of many months, has already been set in motion westward against Cracow, the only important city in Galicia remaining in Austrian possession, according to information received here today.

A gigantic offensive movement is being launched by the Russians all along the line and the indications are that one of the biggest battles yet fought on Austrian soil is developing.

It is claimed that 850,000 Russians are massed in the new movement.

Estimates of the number of Austrian prisoners taken at Przemysl vary, but a dispatch from Lemberg states that more captives were taken than was first believed, and that the number may reach 100,000, which, however, may include civilians.

AUSTRIAN SOLDIERS REBEL.

An official statement by the War Office says:

"During the last days before the final sortie the garrison received increased rations. Each soldier was given biscuits to last five days, warm, new clothing and new boots. Officers were instructed to explain to the troops that if they returned to the fortress an inglorious fate awaited them, and consequently they must pierce the Russian front at any cost.

"An easterly direction was chosen for the sortie, as the line of least resistance as well as because it led to the district where the Russians had large stores or arms and ammunition. More than 20,000 men were ordered to participate in the sortie, but several units refused to move despite the urgings of the commanders. Only the Twenty-third Honved

FNAL APPEAL OF PRZEMYSL COMMANDER TO HIS MEN

PETROGRAD, March 23.—Following is the text of an order issued by General Kusmanek to the garrison of Przemysl on the eve of the final sortie:

"Soldiers—For half a year we children of almost all nationalties of the beloved Fatherland, have been incessantly opposing the enemy. With the help of God and your bravery we have successfully defended the fortress against the enemy despite attacks, privations and cold.

"You already merit the highest gratitude of your Commander-in-Chief and country, and have won the admiration even of the enemy. In the beloved Fatherland, thousands of hearts beats for you and millions wait with bated breath for news from you.

"Heroes, I announce to you my last summons. The honor of your coutnry demands it. I shall lead you to pierce with your bayonets the iron circle of the enemy.

"On, then, march on, even further; be unsparing in your efforts until we join the main ormy, which, after a hard fight, now nears us. We are on the eve of a great battle, for the enemy will be reluctant to abandon a prize he has coveted so long. Know then, true defenders of Przemysl, each one must have but one thought. That is, forward; ever forward, smash eevrything that bars your path.

"Soldiers: We have shared our last provisions. The honor of our country and ourselves forbids that after our glorious struggle we should fall an easy prye to the enemy. Be heroic, warriors, and we shall open the way."

TODAY'S MARKET SUMMARY.

Industrials were again the feature when the New York market opened, a number making good gains. Mining issues continued to advance in Boston.

Heavy buying of war supplies in this country by European powers sent sterling exchange in New York yesterday to 4.78¼ for demand and 4.78¾ for cables. These are the lowest figures on record. Offerings of commercial bills were on a great scale. War orders from Europe are said to be steadily increasing in volume and variety. Bankers look for a continued flow of gold to this country, unless foreigners unload securities here to establish a credit here.

At the opening in New York Bethlehem Steel advanced 1 to 73, U. S. Rubber was up 1⅜ at 63¾, National Lead rose 2¼ to 59¼, American Beet Sugar gained ½ to 44⅛, Reading was off ½ at 143, Steel was up ¼ at 45⅞, Amalgamated was up ⅛ at 58⅜, Rock Island was off ⅜ at 20⅛.

In Boston, Copper Range was up ⅜ at 37⅞. American Zinc was up ¼ at 28, North Butte was up ½ at 27¼, Mohawk was up ½ at 60¾, Greene Cananea was up ½ at 30, Alaska Gold was up ½ at 35 and Lake was up ⅜ at 10½.

Americans were lower in London. May wheat opened ¼ up at Chicago. Other months were lower. The New York cotton market opened steady, with prices unchanged to 1 point lower.

Condition of McAdoo Serious, Reports Say

WASHINGTON, March 23.—The condition of Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo is "very serious" it was stated at his office today. This gave rise to the report that the secretary suffered a relapse following his removal to his home from Providence Hospital, where he was operated on for appendicitis. A rumor was also circulated that the secretary was suffering from hernia. No admission of these reports would be made at the secretary's office, but it was stated that the wound necessitated by the operation has not healed and that the operation was performed under unfavorable conditions, as Mr. McAdoo had held out against it too long and his vitality was low following the Winter's hard work.

Italians to Search Steamer Finland

PARIS, March 23.—A dispatch today from Naples says the steamship Finland, from New York, has been boarded by Italian customs guards, following the reported discovery of contraband ammunition in her cargo. It is said six guards have been ordered to proceed with the Finland to Genoa, where a thorough search of the ship will be made. The Finland sailed from New York in February for Gibraltar and cleared that port March 6 for Naples and Genoa.

REPORT ANOTHER SUBMARINE SUNK

LONDON, March 23.—A German submarine is reported to have been destroyed by a mine in the English Channel off West Hastings early today. A dispatch to the Star from Hastings says:

At 6 o'clock this morning two loud reports of firing or explosions were heard at West Hastings. Shortly afterwards a German submarine was observed about three miles out, gliding along eastward. The vessel was partly submerged and her deck was sea-swept. Within a few minutes the submarine plunged suddenly beneath the water. She was not seen again.

"It is probable that she hit a mine and the reports heard at West Hastings were the explosion of the mine and a subsequent explosion on the submarine.'

Russians Gain Over Turks in Caucasus

PETROGRAD, March 23.—Today's official report from Caucasus headquarters states that fighting occurred Sunday in the Trans-Tschorokh and Alaschgard districts, the Russians gaining marked advantages over the Turks.

GIBRALTAR, March 23.—Spain's destroyer flotilla has been ordered to the Canary Islands from Cadiz to prevent the departure of German ships interned at Las Palmas.

Report Another German Spy Has Been Executed

NEW YORK, March 23.—Reports reached here today of the execution of another German spy in London Tower. Carl Hans Lody was executed in the Tower as a spy last November. The greatest secrecy has been maintained by the British officials concerning the second execution, but the latest spy is said to have been one of a trio arrested just before the sailing of the Tuscania from Liverpool.

John Hann, Muller and Meyer were the names given by the men. The one found guilty was taken before a shooting squad of the Honorable Artillery company. Three of their number had their carbines loaded with ball cartridges, the others were blank. At the word of command from the sergeant, the six men fired. The lifeless body of the spy was removed for burial.

It is stated a second prisoner is in the tower, awaiting confirmation of his sentence (death or imprisonment), and has given considerable trouble to the authorities.

Apologizes for Killing McManus

WASHINGTON, March 23.—General Palafox, military governor of Mexico City, for General Zapata, has apologized officially to the Brazilian minister as the representative of the United States there for the killing of John B. McManus, an American citizen, by Zapatista soldiers on the recent entry into the city.

A dispatch from the Brazilian minister says the matter of the payment of indemnity is "progressing satisfactorily." No mention is made of developments in the search for the assassins.

Six thousand Carranzista troops have sailed from Vera Cruz for Tampico to aid in the defence of the port.

TO QUIZ PARENT OF CHOIR GIRL

WORCESTER, March 23.—In search of the secret sweetheart of twenty-year-old Olive E. Shurtlieff of Lakeview district, the choir girl whose sudden death in Mrs. Georgianna La Roche's massage parlor revealed her desperate condition, the police planned today to question Olive's mother, Mrs. Henry H. Shurtlieff, at greater length.

In deference to the family and friends of the dead girl it was believed that the police arranged to put off their second questioning of the girl's mother until after the funeral this afternoon.

Mrs. Shurtlieff had known of her daughter's predicament since Christmas. She has already said:

"Olive told me just before Christmas of the situation she faced. I know of no medical treatment she may have received."

With this information in the mother's hands as a starter, the police wish to get any hint that the girl may have given as to the identity of her secret sweetheart.

ABSOLVE FIANCE.

U. S. Note of Inquiry Is Sent to Japan

WASHINGTON, March 23.—A note of inquiry has been addressed to Japan by the United States, President Wilson today told his callers. He stated it was prompted by the conflicting reports regarding the negotiations between Japan and China and represented the desires of the United States to get accurate information on the subject. The chief executive clearly stated that the note did not indicate either approval or disapproval of any action that Japan has taken. No reply to this note has yet been received, according to the President.

Kaiser's "German Hymn of Victory"

BERLIN, March 23.—The Berlin press, in commenting today upon the government's success in raising a new war loan of $2,250,000,000, quotes the following phrase from the Kaiser's telegram of congratulation to Finance Minister Helffreich as the German hymn of victory: "Our enemies must now realise that Germany lacks neither military nor economic weapons."

CAPT. FORTESCUE TELLS THE TRUTH ABOUT THE WAR

The first uncensored story of the war by a correspondent who has visited all the different fronts is told today by Captain Granville Fortescue, United States military aide at the White House in President Roosevelt's term, now war correspondent of the Boston AMERICAN.

Captain Fortescue is in New York for a month's vacation. He has spent the past seven months in strenuous campaigning. Captain Fortescue has alternately camped with the armies of England, France, Belgium, Russia and Germany.

Just back from the Polish front, the scene of the war's mightiest struggles to date, he makes the following points:

1.—He finds German army units better from a military standpoint than the corresponding units in any other army with the possible exception of the British.

2.—He finds many French Generals unqualified, and Russian officers lacking in experience.

3.—He believes ammunition and supplies will be the decisive factor in the war. If the Russians are able to cross the Carpathians next Summer and march on Budapest, that may decide the outcome. He does not believe the war will end in July.

4.—He strongly praises the French artillery. He was surprised by the splendid work he saw the Russian artillery do.

5.—Captain Fortescue says emphatically the Germans hope to take Warsaw.

6.—He finds no evidence that there is lack of food supplies in Germany.

7.—The invasion of Germany by the allies will be impossible, the expert believes.

8.—A battle of fleets, says Captain Fortescue, would decide the war for the victorious navy.

9—He thinks the Germans have lost one million men, their opponents about 850,000.

10—He predicts a German air raid over London in the Spring, when weather conditions are favorable.

"Before I make any statements as to my opinions regarding conditions in the war zone," he said, "I would like to have it clearly known that I take no sides in the controversy. Since I returned to America I have been asked often if I were pro-German or pro-allies, and my answer has invariably been that I am pro-United States.

"In all that I have seen of the operations I have tried to approach the problem from the viewpoint of a neutral first, and, second, from the, to me, exceedingly interesting angle of an army officer. So that I hope in reading what I have to say one will always bear that fact in mind. Where I give praise, I give praise not because my sympathies aare with the side I happen to be discussing, but simply because the obvious superiority demands my admiration from a military point of view. I shall not speak of the cause or the moral side of the war, but only of the material and military side which I have seen and know.

"I was exceedingly fortunate in seeing all the armies in action save the Serbians and the Turks.

"I was fortunate in being in Belgium at the outbreak of the war, and saw the first conflicts, beginning with Liege, passing through that afflicted country down the valley of the Meuse to Namur and culminating at the battle of Dinant.

"Here I saw the operations of the French Army of the North, which was supposed to defend the line of the Sambre at Charleroi in conjunction with the English army. I had extraordinary opportunities of judging their state of preparedness and efficiency.

"Afterward I returned to London

Jury Visits Tombs to Assess Value

A Suffolk County jury is asked by Lewis L. Jones, undertaker, to assess the value of five tombs in the Cathedral of St. Paul of the Episcopal diocese of Massachusetts, which is on Tremont street, opposite the Common. The tombs, he says, belong to him, and after the church in January, 1914, voted to take them, it made an appraisal of their value, which is not satisfactory. The jury inspected the tombs today.

GREAT RUSSIAN ARMY BEGINS THE ADVANCE UPON CRACOW

division and some parts of the Eighty-fifth Landwehr and Fourth Hussars took an active part. They were promptly and decisively defeated.

When the Russians entered Przemysl they found it a city of death, disease and ruins. All the horses except those owned by army officers had been killed for food. Foul water had caused an outbreak of typhoid fever. The hospitals were full of sick, wounded and dying.

FORTS DYNAMITED.

The streets of the suburbs were ridged with mounds where dead soldiers had been buried. The great forts were masses of wreckage, having been dynamited on orders of General Hermann Von Kusmanek, commander of the garrison. Although the victory was a big one, it had cost the Russians dearly. It is estimated that 150,000 Russians were killed and wounded during the months that the siege went on. Not only were many Russians killed by the efficient fire of the Austrian gunners, but the fierce sorties where attacker and defender fought at hand to hand resulted in heavy casualties.

Toward the last the Austrians grew prodigal of ammunition and decided to hasten it by expending all their ammunition in one great burst of cannonading.

The Austrians are reported to be rushing all possible reinforcements to Cracow and the Carpathians to resist the sweep of the Russians. It will require a gigantic force to stem the onrush of Grand Duke Nicholas' host, for the Russians are reported to be massing close to 850,000 men in the Carpathians and on territory adjacent thereto.

Complete control of East and Central Galicia is given to the Russians by the fall of Przemysl. The Russians also hold the Cracow railway line from Przemysl to Tarnow, which will give them a tremendous advantage in transporting men and artillery against the later city.

Calls to the Germans to aid will probably be answered in the negative, for Field Marshal Von Hindenburg has use for all his men in Poland at present. It appears that the Austrians will have to fight their own battle supported by the comparatively small number of Germans that happen to be in Galicia at this time.

AUSTRIAN MORALE BROKEN.

Russian newspapers speak of the capture of Przemysl as one of the really important achievements of the war, and Grand Duke Nicholas is highly praised for the patience and caution which the attacking force exercised to keep down the casualties. It is reported that the Czar has sent a telegram of congratulation to the Russian commander, although any message sent to the front will be delayed owing to a great blizzard which has played havoc with telegraphic communication.

This storm has prevented all the details of the capture from reaching here, but a belated message from Lemburg states that 20,000 Austrians took part in a final sortie—a forlorn hope against the Russian ring of steel. Some of the starved, worn out Austrian detachments refused to take part in this last attack, showing that the morale of the Austrian defenders had been broken.

The Russians captured a number of standards, but few war supplies fell into their hands with the capture of Przemysl. The city was practically destitute of food and virtually all the ammunition had been shot away. The great guns in the forts had been rendered useless in most cases by the blowing up of the works. However, it is estimated that between 75,000 and 80,000 small arms were taken by the captors.

VIENNA REPORTS 15,000 ESCAPED FROM PRZEMYSL

VIENNA, via Berlin and Amsterdam, March 23.—That 15,000 soldiers of the garrison of Przemysl succeeded in escaping from the besieged fortress and joining the main Austrian forces on the upper San River is the assertion made in dispatches received from Cracow today. These declare that only few forces were left in Przemysl when it surrendered to the Russians after accomplishing its main purpose, holding back the Russians until the Austrian and German troops in the Carpathian front could make the preparations necessary to meet the main Russian armies.

Vienna newspapers today devoted large space to praise of the heroic defenders of Przemysl.

"Austrian valor met its test and proved its worth at Przemysl," says the Neue Presse. "Isolated by the Russian hordes that swept down upon them and enclosed them within a ring of iron they fought on and held their ground until the forces of nature compelled them to yield.

"They accomplished their task. They held the enemy at bay and their sorties inflicted heavy losses upon him. All patriotic Austrians regret the fall of Przemysl, but their grief is assuaged by memory of the glory won by the gallant defenders whose slogan was 'For God, for Emperor and Fatherland.'"

Officials of the War Office asserted today that the loss of Przemysl would have no effect upon the main campaign in the Carpathians and on the Dunajec River, across which the Russians were driven with terrific losses when they launched their first campaign against Cracow.

Massive field works have been constructed upon the west bank of the Dunajec and Austria's military leaders assert the positions of the Teutonic troops there are practically impregnable.

Greco-Bulgarian Postal Pact Signed

ATHENS, March 23.—Official announcement was made today that the Greco-Bulgarian postal and telegraphic convention, relating to mail and wire inter-communication, was signed Monday.

100,000 Refugee Turks in Asia Minor

ATHENS, March 23.—According to reliable information received here, 100,000 Mussulmans from Constantinople and the vicinity have taken refuge in the interior of Asia Minor since the allies began their attacks upon the Dardanelles forts.

GEN. VON KUSMANEK, defender of Przemysl, who surrendered to Russians after many months' siege.

300,000 TURKS TO SUPPORT FORTS

CONSTANTINOPLE, via Berlin and Amsterdam, March 22.—Three hundred thousand Turkish troops have been concentrated on Gallipoli peninsula and the southern side of the Dardanelles to oppose efforts by the allies to take the forts along the straits by assault.

It was asserted at the War Office today that all preparations to meet English and French land attacks under cover of a bombardment by the allies' fleet had been perfected. Three landings attempted by English marines on Gallipoli peninsula have already been repulsed, and the Turkish military authorities profess confidence that larger forces will be no more successful.

It was officially announced today that quiet prevailed along the Dardanelles Monday, the hostile fleet making no effort to renew the bombardment of the forts. During the lull repairs necessitated by the shells of the British and French ships have been made.

There is no impression here that the allies will abandon their attempts to force the Dardanelles. The next attack is ordered to be more severe than any of the recent ones. A great fleet of transports is reported to have joined the allied fleet off Tenedos. Those are believed to have on board the land forces that England and France have sent here to co-operate with their fleet. A Turkish military aviator who made a successful flight along the coast of Asia Minor reported via Smyrna that the transports probably have on board 60,000 men.

Rumors of strife in the Turkish cabinet were officially denied today. It was stated that reports of differences between Enver Pasha and Talsat Bey were wholly baseless.

FLEET OF ZEPPELINS AGAIN MAKES A DASH NEAR PARIS

PARIS, March 23.—After striving for six hours to attack Paris under cover of darkness, a fleet of German Zeppelins sped away to the northward at 3 o'clock this morning, with a squadron of French aeroplanes in pursuit.

Bombs were dropped by the German airships upon a number of villages around Paris, but their explosions caused no deaths, although considerable damage was done. The Zeppelins all escaped. They were pursued by the French aviators as far as the German lines.

The second Zeppelin attack upon Paris in forty-eight hours was first signalled at 9 o'clock last night. The German arships, believed to number eight, were divided into two groups. They attempted to approach the city from the northwest and northeast.

At the first alarm the city was darkened and a fleet of French aeroplanes rose from their stations and set out to meet the aerial monsters. The Zeppelins retired, but instead of abandoning their attempt to fly over Paris they circled about the city.

Believing that the Zeppelins had returned to their base, most of the French aviators returned to Paris, but three remained on scout duty. Shortly after 11 o'clock one of them reported sighting Zeppelins over Villers Cotterets.

PURSUED BY MONOPLANES.

Once more the alarm sounded and the lights of the city, which had been relighted, were again extinguished. All the French searchlights were again put in action and the aeroplane fleet again set out to give battle to the enemy.

As the Zeppelins circled about the city they were pursued by the monoplanes and given no opportunity to turn their course toward the main section of Paris. Finally, at 3 o'clock this morning, they darted away to the northward. This time there was no abandonment of the pursuit. The aeroplanes kept at the heels of the big airships until they crossed the River Aaisne.

The first alarm of danger caused no panic in Paris. Thousands of men, women and children poured into the streets, exposing themselves to danger, but determined to see any details of an aerial battle that might take place above them.

SIX HOUSES WRECKED.

Many of the spectators later returned to the theatres, concert halls and moving pictures shows, however, and refused to leave their seats when the second alarm was sounded.

All necessary precautions against the Zeppelins were taken with great rapidity. Ten minutes after the first alarm all the military forces in the entrenched camp were moving to the danger points to receive the Zeppelins' attack.

Aerial guns on the northern forts shouted their messages of challenge as soon as the Zeppelins were sighted.

Troops in all the villages around Paris were also on the alert at the first signal flashed from the main headquarters. The soldiers remained on duty until dawn.

The most severe damage done by the German bombs was at Villers Cotterets. Three of the bombs were dropped there and six houses were wrecked.

CREW OF BOUVET SANK SHOUTING "VIVE LA FRANCE"

PARIS, March 23.—The crew of the French battleship Bouvet went to their death standing at salute and shouting "Vive la France" when the ship was sunk in the Dardanelles by a Turkish mine. Details of the destruction of the Bouvet and her gallant crew were received here from a press correspondent telegraphing from Tenedos.

The captain of the Bouvet had been ordered to cross a dangerous mine zone and force a passage to Chanak Kalosei, thus making the allies master of the straits as far as Nagara.

The Bouvet was five miles from Chanak and was firing at Fort Dardanus. She had crossed two mine zones. The Gaulois followed, firing all her guns. The Bouvet's commander by a skilful manoeuvre avoided two mines, which were exploded by a destroyer, but a third struck her near the magazines and she sank by the head.

Seven survivors of the Bouvet climbed into a boat and spent the night in a bay on the European side of the straits. They were taken off the next day by a British destroyer. When the captain of the Gaulois saw the Bouvet was sinking, he ordered full steam ahead without an instant's hesitation, but his ship had been struck seven times and he was obliged to put back, anchoring off Navarais Island.

A Mytilene dispatch says a division of the allied fleet is still keeping watch on the Smyrna gulf.

GERMAN AVIATORS' BOMBS KILL THREE RHEIMS CIVILIANS

PARIS, March 23.—German aviators have added to the devastation wrought in Rheims by the bombardment of the Kaiser's artillery. They threw several bombs upon Rheims yesterday and killed three civilians there, says this afternoon's official communique from the War Office. The communique reports some progress in Champagne and the repulse of two German counter attacks in the Argonne.

The text of the communique follows:

"The enemy bombarded Rheims yesterday. A German aviator throwing bombs upon the city made three of the civilian inhabitants his victims.

"In Champagne we advanced slightly to the east of hill No. 196. In the Argonne the enemy made two violent counter attacks in an effort to regain the ground lost by him Monday. He was completely repulsed."

RUSSIAN TOWN OF KROTTINGEN TAKEN BY GERMAN TROOPS

BERLIN, March 23.—(By wireless.)—The Russian town of Krottingen, about twelve miles north of Memel, has been captured by German troops pursuing the Russians, who were forced to retreat after occupying Memel, according to today's official report from the German general staff. It states that when Krottingen was occupied the Germans set free more than 3,000 civilians who had been taken away into captivity by the Russians when they abandoned Memel.

The general staff's report tells of a new aerial attack on Ostend by aviators of the allies. No military damage was done, it says, but several Belgians were killed and injured. The general staff's report follows:

"Eastern war theatre.—German troops pursuing the Russians driven from Memel have occupied the Russian town of Krottingen and freed more than 3,000 German inhabitants driven away from Memel by the Russian troops. Russian attacks on both sides of the Orzyc river have been repulsed.

"Western war theatre.—Two night attacks by the French near Carency, northwest of Arras, were repulsed by our troops yesterday.

"In Champagne, German troops successfully blew up mines. They also repulsed a night attack north of Beausejour.

"Minor French advances near Combres, Apremont and Flirey were unsuccessful. An attack against the German positions northeast of Badonvillier broke down under the German artillery fire. The enemy suffered heavy losses.

"Aviators of the enemy threw several bombs upon Ostend. No military damage was done, but several Belgians were killed and wounded. A French aviator was shot down northwest of Verdun. A French aircraft manned by two non-commissioned officers was forced to land near Freiburg. Its occupants were taken prisoners."

Another British Ship Torpedoed

LONDON, March 23.—The British steamer Concord, of 1,825 tons, was torpedoed by a German submarine in the English Channel. The crew of twenty-six men were landed at Dover. The vessel is reported still afloat.

Under-Water Eye for Submarines Makes Them 10 Times as Deadly

HUDSON MAXIM announced today that he has perfected an invention making it possible for submarines to attack an enemy without showing even their periscopes.

The inventor refused to give details, but stated that his invention will enable a submarine to cruise and to discharge its torpedoes completely submerged. Naval men declare such an invention will increase the deadliness of the submarine 1,000 per cent.

"Submarines are blind when submerged," said a naval officer yesterday. "Before making an attack their periscopes must rise above the surface so that the man in the conning tower can see his target. The submarine then becomes very vulnerable to gun fire.

"If Mr. Maxim's invention is put into use it will mean this danger will be eliminated. The craft to be attacked will have no warning of the submarine's presence."

Were the United States to have sole access to such a device, it would give our navy superiority over every other naval power in the world.

Hudson Maxim.

The giant seagoing submarine Schley, to be built by the Electric Boat Company, will be able to cross the Atlantic and return under her own power. If the new Maxim invention is installed that vessel will become the most formidable fighting craft of her type in the world. She is 265 feet in length and displaces 1,100 tons at the surface.

CABINET MEETING ON U. S. PROTEST

WASHINGTON, March 23.—President Wilson and his cabinet today went over the points to be made by the United States in the note to be sent to Great Britain and France on the plan to cut off all trade with Germany.

The policy of silence as to the nature of the representations was maintained by the cabinet and no statement was forthcoming except that the note would be sent to England and France within a few days.

It was intimated, however, by persons close to the administration that the representations would uphold strongly the stand of this government that neutral commerce, except in contraband, must be free to move. In spite of this, it was asserted, the attitude of the United States during the Civil War may be cited, as it is claimed by legal experts that the situation then practically was the same as in the present case.

The decision of the United States "Matamoras cases" furnishes strong foundation for the communication to be sent to England and France, they say.

In the "Matamoras cases" the Peterhoff and other ships were captured and the cargoes condemned by the prize court. They were enroute from England to Matamoras, Mexico. Chief Justice Chase, on appeal to the Supreme Court ruled that "Neutral commerce with Matamoras except in contraband," was entirely free and that trade between London and Matamoras, even with intent to supply, from Matamoras, goods to Texas, violated no blockade and cannot be declared unlawful."

President Wilson in his discussion with callers today, let it be known that the reply of the United States is not yet ready. He would not go further than this, intimating that he did not regard himself in a position to reveal what the contents of the notes will be. Extreme care is being taken to avoid any false steps, and not a single statement will be made in the American answer which has not been completely verified by the legal experts of the State Department.

VICTORY HASTENS ITALIAN ACTION

ROME, March 23.—Przemysl's fall is expected to hasten to a conclusion the pending negotiations for the acquirement by Italy of Austrian territory which are to determine the future attitude of the Italian government. A member of the diplomatic corps asserted today that since Berlin was made cognizant of the approaching fall of Przemysl, Germany has increased its pressure upon Austria to grant Italy's territorial demands, and thus avert the participation of Italy in the war.

It became known today that the Duke d'Abruzzi, commander of the Italian dreadnought squadron, made a secret visit to Rome last week and conferred with Premier Salandra and King Victor Emmanuel.

TWO OLD CABOT WILLS IN COURT

Two old wills, one drawn by the late Louis Cabot of Brookline, and the other by his wife, Amy Hemenway Cabot, in which each named the other executor and beneficiary, were introduced in the Cabot will trial today by Attorney Charles F. Choate, Jr., counsel for the will.

Both wills were drawn in December, 1886. The will of Mr. Cabot is not the one which is now being contested by Mrs. L. Vernon Briggs, daughter of Cabot, but in it Cabot says he purposely omits making provision for his children.

The old wills were identified by Henry B. Cabot a nephew, who resumed his direct testimony as a witness for the will. He told of a conversation he had in 1911 with the late Louis Cabot, during which Cabot complained of the burden of maintaining his Brookline estate.

"He said that the Brookline place was too large," witness testified, "and that the expense was heavy. He said he didn't care for the Brookline house, but his wife was interested and cared for it very much. He was wondering if he should turn the house over to his daughters and allow them to help keep it up. He asked me if I considered it a wise arrangement and I told him I did not think it was proper for me to discuss such a question, particularly where it concerned his wife and daughters."

Cabot testified to financial matters he had handled for Mr. Cabot. He said he had access to the strong box in which Mr. Cabot kept his securities. It was among the papers in this box that the old will was found.

Q.—Did you, among other papers, find what purported to be an old will of Mr. Cabot? A.—I don't know whether I or one of the other executors found it.

Q.—Is that Mr. Cabot's signature? A.—Yes.

Attorney Choate then read the will:

"I, Louis Cabot of Brookline, in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, make this my last will and hereby revoke all former wills by me made.

"I bequeath and devise to my wife, Amy Hemenway Cabot, all the property and estate of every description of which I may die seized or possessed or to which I may be entitled.

"I nominate the said Amy Hemenway Cabot to be the executrix of this will and request that she be not required to furnish any surety upon her bond as such executrix.

"The omission in this will to provide for my children or any of them is intentional and is not occasioned by accident or mistake.

"In testimony whereof I hereto set my hand and in the presence of three witnesses declare this to be my last will, this 5th day of December, A. D. 1886. (Signed) LOUIS CABOT.

"Louis Cabot of Brookline, Mass., signed the foregoing instrument in our presence, declaring it to be his last will, and as witnesses thereof we three do now at his request, in his presence and in the presence of each other hereto subscribe our names.

(Signed) "FRANCIS L. HAYES,
"E. A. BANGS,
"MORRIS DORR."

Witness Cabot further testified that on or about October 30, 1911, Mr. Cabot said he had about made up his mind to tie up his estate among his grandchildren and not leave his daughters anything.

HOW TO PREVENT ACID STOMACHS

AND FOOD FERMENTATION

By a Stomach Specialist

As a specialist who has spent many years in the study and treatment of stomach troubles, I have been forced to the conclusion that most people who complain of stomach trouble possess stomachs that are absolutely healthy and normal. The real trouble, that which causes all the pain and difficulty is excessive acid in the stomach, aggravated by food fermentation. Hyperacidity irritates the delicate lining of the stomach and food fermentation causes wind which distends the stomach abnormally, causing that full bloated feeling. Thus both acid and fermentation interfere with and retard the process of digestion. The stomach is usually healthy and normal, but irritated almost past endurance by these foreign elements—acid and wind. In all such cases—and they comprise over 90 per cent. of all stomach difficulties—the first and only step necessary is to neutralize the acid and stop the fermentation by taking in a little warm or cold water immediately after eating, from one to two teaspoonfuls of bisurated magnesia, which is doubtless the best and only really effective antacid and food corrective known. The acid will be neutralized and the fermentation stopped almost instantly, and your stomach will at once proceed to digest the food in a healthy, normal manner. Be sure to ask your druggist for the bisurated magnesia, as I have found other forms utterly lacking in its peculiarly valuable properties.—F. J. G.

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE WAR TOLD BY CAPTAIN GRANVILLE FORTESCUE

President Roosevelt's Military Aide, Back from the Front, Declares Conflict Will Not End in July

American's War Correspondent, Home on Furlough, Thinks Decisive Battle of Fleets Would Have Greatest Effect in Bringing Peace in Europe But Does Not Think Germans Will Risk Engagement and proceeded to Berlin as the correspondent of the Boston AMERICAN, and followed the German operations from that side for three weeks. I was treated with the greatest courtesy by the gentlemen of both the military and diplomatic offices in Germany, and was taken by them to Liege, where I had the opportunity of checking up the observations I had made from the Belgian side.

"Since that date I have been in Berlin as recently as February 15.

"The difficulties that beset the correspondents are well known now to every one, and we who are doing our best to try and paint word pictures of what we see on the battle front not only have to take the chances of shell and shot, but also are in continual danger of being mistaken for spies by the forces with whom we chance to be working.

"My experiences in France were rather unfortunate. There I was arrested three times, although my papers were always in first-class order. I spent on the Belgian and French frontiers in the theatre of operations a period of three months at the beginning of the war, subtracting the three weeks I was in Germany.

"The extraordinary opportunities I had have made it possible for me to get, I think, a comprehensive idea of the value of the different armies engaged."

I.

Finds Units of the German Army of the Highest Tactical Value.

"Lord Kitchener says that 'Generals win battles, soldiers win a war,' so that the spirit of the armies is, therefore, most important," it was suggested to Captain Fortescue. "How do the armies that you have seen compare in this respect? That is to say, the British with the French, the French with the Russian, and all three allies with the German and Austrian armies."

"The difficulty in answering that question arises in the fact that armies are not stationary," he replied. "They vary in their value from day to day, depending entirely upon the circumstances of the military operations. With this understanding, however, we can try and make a general comparison of the effectiveness of the forces engaged.

"I don't hesitate to say from what I have seen and judged purely from a military standpoint, that the German units—regiments, brigades and division corps—are of higher tactical value than corresponding units in any of the other units in any of the other armies, with the possible exception of the British, at least the British of the first expeditionary force.

"Before the war began I was in a manner conversant with the German organization and I have had the opportunity of seeing that organization tested by the most rigorous demands of warfare. I can say unqualifiedly that it has stood the test without a break. The spirit of the troops is splendid.

"There has been a great deal of fun, I might say, poked at the soldiers and officers of the German army for having received the highest award—the Iron Cross—in such great numbers. Personally, I am of the opinion that all the men I have seen under fire have qualified according to the highest standards of courage for any honor their country can bestow upon them.

"The troops of the German army whom I describe, however, are men of the first line, and it must be known that the Landwehr and Landsturm are naturally not so effective as the younger regiments.

"The British force, which after all is a very small part of the land fighting force, only 8 per cent. of the armies in the field at first are also troops of the very highest tactical value. This has been admitted to me by German officers themselves. It must be remembered here also that the new British army which is now taking the field cannot possibly compare with the men of the expeditionary forces in training, although it may closely approach the same in morale.

PRAISES FRENCH SOLDIER, CRITICISES HIS GENERALS.

"I have the greatest admiration for the French private soldier. He is to my mind the most intelligent fighting man now engaged. While he does not like war, yet in spite of this he does his work in a most thorough and scientific manner. What I say of the French common soldier, however, does not apply to the officers of higher rank. Naturally I speak of the French army as it was during the first phase of the war, and now it is admitted by the French themselves that they were unprepared.

"The general officers whom I came in contact with at the time impressed me as being entirely unqualified for the tasks alloted to them. Since I left the zone of their operations I have heard that General Joffre has summarily retired some forty-eight general officers. This cannot but help to raise the general standard of the army.

"The general officers commanding at the beginning of the war were men who had risen to their positions by simply sitting still and waiting for the usual accidents of promotion. A test of war soon determines whether these men ar fitted or unfitted for their positions.

"My observations of the Russian army led me to believe that a great change had been brought in the forces of the Czar since I had seen them at Port Arthur. It is rather difficult to impress upon any one not familiar with the situation the tremendous effect of what I might term the 'water wagon' order, which placed all of Russia on a prohibition basis. The common soldiers cannot obtain anything to drink, and the officers are in the same situation, for, although the latter may be able to obtain wine with extraordinary effort, they never made this attempt.

FINDS RUSSIAN OFFICERS LACK EXPERIENCE.

"The Russian army is well equipped and well organized, but here, too, we find that corps and division commanders are lacking in experience.

"It is a very serious problem how to give these officers, who must carry out the orders of the Commander-in-Chief in war, the proper training in time of peace. Germany is the only country, as far as I know, that has seriously attempted to solve this problem. German manoeuvres are largely taken up with the entraining and detraining of divisions, corps and armies. This special work gives the generals in command an unusual opportunity of learning how to handle most effectively the forces at their disposal.

"Here is where the Germans excel. They have, as has been so often stated, superiority of mobility. Against this the Russians place their native stubbornness, and there are no more stubborn fighters in the world than the Russians on defensive.

"Of the Austrians, I do not wish to make any definite statement, as I know that some of their best troops have not been thrown into the firing line. If Italy should enter the contest on the side of the allies, it is very possible that Austria would give a much better account of herself against Italian troops than she has against the Russians."

II.

Thinks the Decisive Factor Will Be Ammunition and Supplies.

Captain Fortesque was reminded that Hilaire Belloc, the noted authority on military affairs, had estimated that for the Summer and Autumn campaign this year the allies will be able to put four million fresh troops, fully armed, into the field, and that Germany and Austria will be able to put only three million more men in.

"What do you think of these figures?" he was asked.

"There is no greater delusion in calculating the probabilities of war than that of numbers," he answered. "It has been demonstrated again and again in the past that numerically inferior forces can defeat opponents of vastly greater numbers. Therefore, we cannot place much reliance upon mere statistics.

"This statement as to the increased numbers of the allies is actually of little value, because on the face of it it makes for a difference of one million men, and, extraordinary as it may seem, the German superiority of organization might easily offset this advantage in mere numbers.

"To my mind the decisive factor in all fighting is ammunition and ammunition supplies. From what I have seen in the field, there is little to choose between men outside of three classes of courage.

"There are the ordinarily brave, we will say, first, the men who take the chances of shot and shell because they are held to it either by a sense of duty or fear of the officers, or the circumstances under which they are fighting.

"After these come the men who go forward promptly on the word of command and never calculate the risks of a charge.

"Beyond these we have the superlatively brave man who alone carries through some extraordinary feat, such as that performed by Michael O'Leary, V. C., of the Irish Guards. But it can almost be taken for granted that most men are brave. With this in mind we must never be misled by mere figures."

III.

Supreme Effort to Be Made by Allies on Western Front.

"Will the heaviest fighting of the next three months occur on the Russian or on the Franco-Belgian front?" was asked.

"All indications point to a supreme effort of offensive on the part of the English and the French during the Spring months," said Captain Fortescue.

"But there can be no question that there will also be severe fighting in the Russian theatre of operations. It is almost impossible to say where the most severe fighting will be.

"Obviously, the present plan of the allies is to try and engage as many German corps as possible in the coming operations and thereby give them the opportunity of breaking through the German line at some point.

"Because in America we are almost entirely dependent upon English sources for our information as to the operations in France and Flanders, we get a disproportionate view of the part that the English troops are playing in the present line of combat, splendid as it must be conceded the English soldiers are.

"They cover not more than forty of the 400 miles of front, but the publicity they receive is out of all proportion to the effect they may be expected to produce in the general result of the land fighting."

"Do you look for a great decisive battle on either front, or do you expect a general wearing down of the enemy by one side or the other?" Captain Fortescue was asked.

"Nothing is so uncertain as war, and anyone who tries to prophesy exactly what will be the result of future operations is simply guessing," he replied. "We can, however, take the contingencies and resolve from them the probable outcome of operations for six months, or even a year.

"In this conflict so many new factors have entered into tactics and so great are the lines held by the different opposing forces, that to try to fix upon the point of decisive encounter is practically impossible.

DECISIVE FACTORS IN CONCLUDING WAR.

"Of course there will be a decisive encounter, meaning an encounter that will influence one side or the other toward initiating proposals for peace. But to my mind it is very doubtful if there will be a decisive encounter in the sense of an overwhelming encounter in the sense of an overwhelming of a considerable force of troops of any of the larger nations.

"I have friends among the officers of the English, French, Belgian, German, Russian and Austrian regiments. There are men with whom I have been able to discuss this subject almost as an academic problem. I must say that in my conclusions a number of these officers did not agree with me, especially my English friends, but in checking up I find that the majority think the theory which I am about to state is probably accurate.

"The question of concluding the war as we now see it depends upon two factors—the starvation of Germany and the crushing of the German army—at least these are the factors as seen from the point of view of the allies. The German point of view as to the conclusion of the war I would not venture to suggest, as there have been so many changes in the plans of their great general staff that at this moment it is almost impossible to divine what they are driving at.

"For the moment we will not touch upon the question of starving Germany out. Let us look at the possibilities of the French and English and Russians closing in on their common foe.

"On the Russian side I know it will be a most costly operation to drive the Germans from the positions they now hold in Poland and East Prussia. An advance through Hungary, however, is feasible, and to refer back to this question of decisive victories, it is just possible that if the Russian forces are able to cross the Carpathians in the coming Summer and march on Budapest that will decide the outcome of the conflict.

ENORMOUS TOLL OF LIFE IN THE WEST.

"So much has been said of what the French and the English are going to do this Spring and Summer that it is on the western front that we must look for the most active operations. What immediately suggests itself is that these operations will demand an enormous toll in life.

"It is the contention of the officers of the staffs of the French and English armies that during the last six months the German wastage approximates 200,000 men per month. These figures I have on the highest authority.

"Taking these very figures as our guide, we apply them to the operations about to begin. Heretofore the Germans have always taken the offensive. Now the allies have begun to reverse the role. We have seen their first effort in the winning of the line of trenches at Neuve Chapelle. From this battle we can get an indication of the probable loss of the life that will result when the French, English and Belgium line moves forward.

"Let us say roughly that the English lost 20,000 men in taking 4,000 yards of trenches at Neuve Chapelle. It is only a matter of calculation to see how costly an advance along the whole line will be.

"The question that arises is, will this sacrifice of life be justified? I know that the Germans have three splendid lines of defence behind the one which they now hold in Flanders. These lines have been chosen, of course, with an eye to their military requisite, and the gun emplacements are reinforced with concrete; so granting that it is possible for the English and Belgians to drive their foes out of the first line, they will find themselves almost immediately in front of another defence.

"As far as I have been able to find out, the same condition of defensive positions in the rear of the present lines exist where the German troops are now in France. This is also true of Poland.

"So that it seems to me very possible that the loss of life will be so great, granting an active offensive, and the advantages from this offensive will be so small that the non-fighting population will demand a compromise."

IV.

Surprised by the Splendid Work of Russian Artillery.

"How does the artillery of the four great Powers—British, French, Russian and German—compare; which is the best?" was asked.

"The question of artillery is of supreme importance in the present war of positions," Captain Fortescue stated. "In the early stages undoubtedly the French field gun was the most effective. Not only was the gun itself better than any other piece of the armies, but the French artillery branch had been brought to the highest state of efficiency. In other words, I did not find the French army up to the standard, but there certainly can be no criticism of their field artillery.

"In the first phases of the war, the Germans, or rather the Austrians, had superiority of heavy artillery fire. It was Austrian and not German guns that were of the greatest effect in the capture of Antwerp. These guns are 30.5 or, according to American measurement, twelve-inch guns.

"These weapons have been most effective on the eastern and western fronts. I have seen the damage one of these tremendous shells brings about wherever it happens to land. It makes a crater seldom less than ten feet deep and often more than forty paces in circumference.

"At the present time the English heavy artillery is perhaps the best. However, there is not much of it. The French have recently supplied their troops with a heavy field gun, for which they claim superiority to the German artillery they have met.

"I confess to having been surprised at the splendid work done by the Russian artillery. I had not expected the troops of the Czar to excel in this very technical branch.

Captain Granville Fortescue, United States Military Aide at the White House during President Roosevelt's term, now war correspondent of the Boston AMERICAN, who has just returned from the front. He is seen here in uniform he wore while following the armies in the great European conflict.

The Russians have a six-inch howitzer which I think outranges any other piece in use by the Germans or allies. I saw a battery of these guns silence the pair of Austrian twelve-inch cannon which General von Morgan had at Bolimow."

The question of cavalry was quickly disposed of by Captain Fortescue.

"Which of the Powers has the best cavalry?" he was asked, and replied:

"At the present point of operations the cavalry is of minor importance. It is very hard to say where the superiority now lies. The loss in horseflesh has been enormous, and I know that a great many cavalry regiments are reduced to one-fourth of their original effectiveness, and some have been transformed entirely into dismounted troops."

V.

Close Formation of German Attacks Is Explained.

Regarding the statements of the French that the Germans needlessly sacrifice life by attacking in solid formation, and the countercharge of the Germans that the allies constantly waste ammunition—particularly the French forces—by using their artillery at night, Captain Fortescue said:

"I happened to be the first to call attention to the fact that the Germans were advancing in close order, which made a distinct impression upon me when I saw their regiments attacking the defences of Liege, as this formation was directly against all accepted ideas of modern tactics.

"At a later period I had an opportunity of discussing the point of view with an officer of the German General Staff. I knew, of course, that an organization as efficient as the German's and military students who had devoted their lives to the subject would not make such an obvious blunder as this advance in solid formation seemed; and, therefore, I was sure there must be some reasonable explanation.

"The answer of my friend was that it had been concluded by students of fire effect that the greatest advantage with the modern firearm came to bodies of troops advancing in close order. It was only in this way that they could achieve a superiority of fire against any point where their main attack was directed.

"Against this would be placed the effect of the enemies' fire. With the modern bullet, however, the men who had studied the subject decided that mass formations were feasible because the bullet must today more than in former times strike in a vital area, such as the head or abdomen, or a leg bone in order to incapacitate an advancing soldier.

"Men might be struck two, three and even, as has been recorded, as high as five times by infantry bullets and yet continue to advance, provided the brain, bowels or bone frame were missed. Therefore, the German authorities concluded that their formation insured an advantage. It is not possible to decide whether they have as yet made a miscalculation. Undoubtedly their percentage of loss is very high, but we have not the figures which will tell us how many of the men struck on the line of fire returned within a period of five weeks to their organizations.

"It would seem that the Germans have a certain amount of justification for their tactics, because charges on both the Russian and English fronts have been made in close order, although not with the depth employed by the German units.

BOTH SIDES NOW ECONOMIZE IN AMMUNITION.

"Since the beginning of the war there has been a great change in the expenditure of ammunition on all sides. At first, when the supply of ammunition seemed inexhaustible and it was deemed necessary to achieve victory as quickly as possible, cannon were fired until the gun barrels were almost red hot. I know that guns in certain batteries fired as many as 400 shells in a day. Naturally it is quite impossible to replenish the expenditure at this rate.

"To my mind there is too much artillery fire at night. Whenever I have made this statement to officers of artillery with the different armies they have invariably replied that their fire at night was so aimed that it was practically as effective as it was in the day time. With a known objective this is possibly true, but there is no way of knowing in the darkness if your object has moved.

"At the present time there is a tendency to husband artillery ammunition on all sides, and it is only when a serious advance is to be undertaken that this arm is put to its heaviest resource."

VI.

Gives Von Hindenburg Credit for Stopping Russian Offence.

It was recalled that three months ago the Russian advance on Cracow seemed actually to threaten German Silesia with invasion, and when asked what had stopped this advance of the Russian steamroller—German numbers or German military skill—Captain Fortescue answered:

"It must be admitted now that the original Russian offensive plan has broken down. The credit for having stopped the Russian advance must be given to Marshal von Hindenburg. He so employed his troops that they threatened the Russian flank and rear and thus made it necessary for them to change front after they were committed to their original lines. The most wonderful bit of strategy which the war has yet seen was the advance of the German forces down the tongue of land lying between the Vistula and Warta.

"By a most daring manoeuvre the German general concentrated his superiority of force at the only weak point in the Russian line. His attack against Warsaw practically demobilized not only the Russian offensive against Cracow, but also the movements of the Tenth Russian army in East Prussia. The Austrians, co-operating, debouched onto the Carpathian plains, and because of their position made it necessary for the Russians to draw in their long line from Lemburg to Cracow.

"So much has been already written of the superiority of the German transportation that there is no necessity for laying emphasis on this point, but it has been just this superiority which has made it possible for General von Hindenburg to concentrate superiority of numbers at any point he chose in his attack. The last offensive against both flanks of the Russian line was the obvious sequel of all the first operations.

"In my dispatches from Warsaw I predicted such an attack some two weeks before this offensive was put into operation. In no zone of the fighting have the Germans shown more skill than in Poland and East Prussia."

GERMANS STILL HOPE TO TAKE WARSAW.

Captain Fortesque laughed when asked if he thought the Germans really ever expect to take Warsaw.

"I can best answer that question by giving the reply a German officer prisoner made to me when I put the same question to him directly. 'Do the Germans really expect to take Warsaw?' I asked the soldier, who had been captured during one of the great fights that raged across the Bzura River. 'Sure,' he replied.

"Certainly from the political importance of the city it would seem that its capture by the Germans would be a considerable advantage, and there can be no other explanation of their continual assault against the defensive of this city except that they have great hopes of capturing it."

VII.

Doesn't Think the War Is Going to End in July.

Captain Fortescue's attention was called to a statement by Mr. Cremon, a statistical expert for the Royal Statistical Society of London last Tuesday, predicting the end of the war in July through the exhaustion of some of the belligerents. Mr. Cremon estimated the cost of the war up to July at over sixteen billion dollars, and the total economic loss to damaged property and direct and indirect losses at forty-five billions. Great Britain alone, he asserted, will have spent up to the end of July $3,540,000,000.

The statement of Premier Asquith last week that England's expenses up to July would be over $2,500,000,000, and the fact that Germany is supposed to have already spent $2,000,000,000 were noted, and Captain Fortescue was asked:

"Computing the war expenses, as all the authorities seem now to agree at about fifty millions of dollars a day—two millions an hour night and day—what do you think of the possibility of continuing the war another year?"

DISCOUNTS EFFECT OF FINANCES IN ENDING WAR.

"Seeing that so many of the conclusions as to the financial difficulties of the present conflict have proved to be wrong, it is quite impossible to admit that Mr. Cremon is exact when he states that the war must end in July. As he has access to these figures which he put forward, it would be more enlightening if he stated just which Power would be financially ruined. I think undoubtedly that Germany has suffered enormously in this way, but so strong is the spirit of confidence that the business man has reconciled himself to what he believes to be a temporary loss in the hope of further advantages.

"I do not believe that the financial aspect will have the slightest influence on the ultimate success or non-success of the forces opposed. I admit, however, this is a subject on which I have not been able to inform myself as extensively as I would like to have done.

"I don't believe that the war is going to end in July. Taking the figures as stated in this question and granting that they have a definite bearing on the subject, it is hard to think of the war continuing for another year; but as I have already said, the financial question is really a minor one, extraordinary as this statement may seem.

"In Germany it is simply a matter of issuing paper currency which now circulates everywhere throughout the Empire at a premium against silver. Therefore, the German nation needs but to pay for its supplies in the cash it has on hand. How much this is I cannot pretend to estimate, but an indication of their financial standing is the readiness with which the present war loan is being subscribed for in the United States.

VIII.

Finds No Evidence of Lack of Food Supply in Germany.

"From your observations in Berlin, do you think that Germany can be starved out?" he was asked.

"It is quite impossible from the hasty observation one makes in traveling through a country to determine whether a people can be starved or not," was the answer. "As far as I could see, even in my very recent visit to Berlin, there were no indications of lack of food. My meals in the different hotels were ample, and as inexpensive as they always are in Germany. Of course, one ate 'soldier' bread, but that is a very sensible economy.

"This question of being starved out can be best judged by what the South did at the time of the Civil War. We know that Southerners were not as well organized as the Germans economically, and I hardly can believe their spirit could have been higher than that of the Kaiser's subjects.

"In my opinion, the fact that we get most of our news through English sources has led Americans to a false idea of the food question in Germany. Judging from what I have seen, they will take a lot of starving."

"Do you expect Italy to come into the fight, and if so, what will be her fighting field?"

"As I have not been in Italy," replied Captain Fortescue, "I hardly feel qualified to venture an opinion in answer to that question. One only hears the statements of people who are directly interested in one side or the other on such a question and, therefore, it is what lawyers call 'ex parte evidence.'

"I have heard it stated that unquestionably Italy would enter the war on the side of the allies before the end of the present month. In contradiction of this, I have heard it positively stated that Italy would continue her position of neutrality until peace negotiations were inaugurated."

"Suppose the Germans are driven out of Belgium and France back to their own frontier, the line of the Rhine," was suggested, "so that she will have a shorter line to defend and behind the best modern fortifications, what is the possibility of invading Germany?"

THINKS IT IMPOSSIBLE TO INVADE GERMANY.

"I have never admitted that it is possible to invade Germany," was the emphatic answer. "I think that, granting the Germans are driven back from their present positions to the line of the Rhine, the allies will be so exhausted in this effort that they will find it a physical impossibility to attempt crossing over into German territory.

"The problem in Alsace and Lorraine is somewhat different, and here is a probability that the French will develop an attack which may win back these provinces, or part of them, in the course of the coming campaign. This is only a mere guess on my part, however, as I don't know the figures as to the number of troops engaged on both sides in this section of the field of operations."

"Which of the belligerents has suffered most in the number of officers lost, and will not these losses greatly handicap them for many months?"

"The question of officers is one that, it seems to me, would strike all armies about equally," said Captain Fortesque. "Of course it will be a serious handicap in the coming operations. The loss of trained company officers will be felt in the extreme.

"However, it must be remembered that staff and general officers as a rule improve with the progress of a war; so that while there will be a distinct lowering in the standard of regimental leaders and their subordinates, this will be offset by the increased efficiency of higher commanders and their aides. I think that the percentage of loss of officers during the first seven months of the war has been highest in the English army."

"Why is nothing now heard of the German Crown Prince?" was asked.

"I am afraid that the heir to the German throne has been overwhelmed by the publicity he has received in this war, and perhaps he considers it best to hide his very interesting personality among the numerous German general officers that command his father's army."

IX.

Battle of Fleets Would Decide War for Victorious Navy.

"Will you state what one event, in your opinion, will have the greatest effect in ending the war?"

"If the German fleet should emerge from its present harbor and engage the English fleet," was the prompt reply. "I think this would be the determining factor in the ending of the war.

"Whichever side could claim the victory after this encounter would undoubtedly be in a position of such ascendancy that it could readily dictate terms to its opponent. However, I don't think that the German fleet will be so foolish as to venture a contest with the greatly superior British naval force.

X.

Says Prohibition Has Done Wonders for Russian Cause.

"Man for man, are the Germans superior to the French, and how do they compare with the English?"

"It is practically impossible to answer that question, as the worth of different troops and the different units of the opposing regiments are so variable," explained Captain Fortescue.

"Unquestionably the Germans have shown extraordinary heroism and most Spartan qualities under very great trial. But there can be little indictment of French courage. Unquestionably these men who really are intelligent enough to dislike war, have shown the greatest resignation in the face of the severest privations. As for the English, the Germans themselves have paid this enemy the most sincere compliment when they look upon them as their important enemy."

"The Russian army," was Captain Fortescue's quick response to a question as to which of the armies he had been with was the most temperate.

SEES RUSSIAN TRIUMPH IN CONQUEST OF VODKA.

"So much has been said about the disastrous results of the war," he added, "that the good that results from a great world conflict is often overlooked. I don't hesitate to state that if the present prohibition order continues in force in Russia that the greatest good will have resulted to that country from this terrific contest.

"It is practically impossible for us to conceive the advance that has been made in Russia despite the war as the result of the prohibition of the sale of vodka. Wives and families of soldiers are better off today than they ever were in the time of peace. This is entirely due to the fact that it is impossible for the moujik to waste his earnings, no matter how meagre, in what used to be the national drink."

XI.

Finds It a Hard Task to Estimate Losses in Men.

Captain Fortescue was asked to estimate the casualities on either side, taking a general average out of every hundred casualities reported what proportion are killed, fatally wounded, mightily so, or taken prisoners, or missing. In this connection he was also asked if he agreed with Hilaire Belloc's estimates that about one-half of those reported wounded will never get back to active battle again, the other half being maimed, crippled, invalided or otherwise broken and unfit.

"I think the best answer to that would be the statement made to me by certain officers of the allies who had gone into the subject, that German wastage during the first six months of the war was 200,000 men a month. This is, in my opinion, perhaps high. I would say that the total casualities on that side were not more than a million for the period named.

PROPORTION OF DEAD IN CASUALTY LISTS.

"It is practically impossible to estimate the losses of the allies. I don't believe the lists published are in any way complete. However, I see no reason to believe that their combined losses are more than 15 per cent. less than that of their opponents, or about 850,000.

"It is very difficult to make an average of the killed, wounded and missing, as asked, for the figures I would give are after all an estimate, and the circumstances of different fights are so variable that such an estimate cannot have much value. But, in my judgment, taking 100 as a basis, there would be 20 to 25 dead; 50 to 60 wounded, and the remainder prisoners or missing.

"To say that 50 per cent. of the wounded will never more appear in action seems to me to be a very high average. It is quite likely that the figures on different sides would vary. The Russian bullets make a more humane wound than that of any of the other armies. I should judge from my observations of the wounded that at least 80 per cent. of those wounded would in the course of time be found again with the colors."

XII.

Predicts German Air Raid Over London in the Spring.

"Do you take any stock in the frequent report of a coming Zeppelin raid on London when weather conditions are more propitious?" was the last question put to Captain Fortescue, and he replied:

"I have not the slightest doubt that the Germans will attempt a Zeppelin raid over London if they feel that such a manoeuvre will be attended with any possible success.

"I know that Zeppelins and Parsifals are being tried out over Berlin daily at the present time. Unquestionably there must be some radical defect in these lighter-than-air machines which prevents their being used more extensively in the field of fighting.

"Whether they will attempt a raid against London itself is a question that conditions will decide. I think, however, the very recent raid over Calais shows that with the advance of Spring an aerial invasion of England is not improbable.

"Just how effective such an invasion might be is very problematical. Personally, I don't think that the promiscuous bomb dropping from aeroplanes and Zeppelins which has been going on since the beginning of the war has had any effect whatever upon the military situation. I have been within fifty yards of a falling aeroplane bomb on one occasion and within 100 yards of others on different occasions, so that I have been in position to judge how ineffectual this method of attack is.

"If such a bomb happens to fall directly upon a thickly populated point, it may kill or injure from four to eight people. Its effect upon fortifications would be almost nil.

"I hope that those who read what I have stated," said Captain Fortescue in conclusion, "will keep always in mind that I have tried continually to be strictly impartial in giving my opinions.

"Naturally, I cannot speak quite as openly at the present moment as I shall be able to on the close of hostilities, because the information I have absorbed in different areas might be of considerable importance to one or the other of the belligerents. I have been on the inside, and I must be discreet as to some things that I have seen.

"Finally, I must say that with the exception of the French, I have always been treated with consideration, no matter in what zone I have been working. The French have been laboring under the obsession that newspaper men are a direct menace to their operations.

"They quote from the memoirs of General von Moltke on the War of 1870-1, in which he states that a correspondent of the London Standard gave him the information as to the whereabouts of the army of Marshal McMahon when that army was coming to the relief of Bazaine, and through this information he was able to prevent co-operation of these forces and beat them in detail. French officers will tell you that this lost the war for them. Hence, their ban upon war correspondents in the field.

"I cannot close without an expression of thanks for all the kindnesses extended to me by the Belgians. The great figure that has been developed in the present war is their King, 'Albert the Brave.'"

DR. PERIN FAVORS FENWAY POLICE

The Rev. George L. Perin, D. D., head of the Franklin Square House, wants the Fenway better policed for the protection of young women.

"A young woman cannot be too careful of the snares that are laid for her ruin when she comes unprotected from some small country town into a city like this," said Dr. Perin.

"We want to protect the young women on the streets at night, especially in the Fenway.

"Then young women need to be protected in the place where they live. It is not always wise, as I know from a long experience, to encourage the younger women to live in some places which they know nothing about and where evil often lurks under the mask of being respectable."

What to do for a Sore, Tender Skin After Shaving

A prominent physician says he obtained complete relief from a sore, tender skin after shaving by the use of the following formula, which was given to him by a friend from Paris at the beginning of the war. The writer has also used it with remarkable results—so much so that even though he no longer has a tender skin he still must have the preparation for his daily shave on account of its most delightfully refreshing and soothing qualities—just the thing to refreshen and stimulate the skin when you are tired or the morning after a night out. The following is the original French formula:

Jepora Concentrate, 2 oz.; Alcohol, 2½ oz.; Rose Water, 1 oz.; Witch Hazel, ½ oz.

In bad cases apply night and morning; otherwise morning only.

The preparation when made up should be of a peculiarly beautiful red color, with a most refreshing odor. The above formula was shown to several Boston druggists, among them being the Riker-Jaynes Drug Stores, all of whom stated that they can fill it just as well as a Paris pharmacien.

NOTE:—The original preparation made from this formula was put up by Virgil of Paris, under the name of "Eau de Japora," and under this name it is widely used throughout France. "Eau de Japora" is also sold in this country by all Riker-Jaynes Drug Stores Houghton & Dutton Co. and other leading dealers.—Advertisement.

Saves Expense and Lives

Home-Made Cough Syrup.

An item like labeled cough syrup costs the people several million dollars a year. Every item the housewife can save on, is worth while, so that this home-made, reliable, laxative cough and cold medicine will be welcomed by thousands who have never tried it. Many hundreds right in this community already know its worth, according to a well known druggist.

Buy at the drug store a 2½ oz. package of Essence Mentho-Laxene, a concentrated fluid; empty it into a pint bottle. Then make a syrup by pouring a half pint of boiling water into a pint of granulated sugar, stir, cool and fill up the bottle with syrup. Full directions and dosage are contained in each package. A saving of $2.00 to $3.00 is effected, and it cures any curable cough.—Advertisement.

Clubman Wins Miss Riese

Mrs. Theodore Hoague, who was Miss Euphenia Laurette Riese, Dorchester girl bride of Back Bay clubman.

A romance right out of the story books has come to light with the announcement of the marriage on March 13 of Theodore Hoague, Harvard graduate of the class of '98, wealthy lawyer, and member of the Union, Tennis and Racquet and other clubs, to Miss Euphenia Laurette Riese, twenty-one, of Dorchester. She was employed in a downtown jewelry store.

The young lawyer—he is thirty-eight—went in to make a purchase at the store. The young woman—now Mrs. Hoague—waited on him. He fell captive at once and determined to secure an introduction. He secured it, called many times at the home of the bride's parents at No. 8 Hewins street, Dorchester, and finally they slipped away and were married quietly by the Rev. Father John F. Deignan, assistant pastor of St. John's Church, Dorchester. The young couple at once started for the South on their honeymoon where they are now.

FERDINAND AT 75 TAKES BRIDE OF 26

Frank Ferdinand, Roxbury furniture dealer, yachtsman and member of the "Ancients," married Mrs. Anna L. Anderson of No. 1118 Commonwealth avenue, Brighton, this noon. Mr. Ferdinand is seventy-five years and his bride is twenty-six. Her father was a long-time friend of Mr. Ferdinand and she has known Mr. Ferdinand since her childhood.

The ceremony was performed at 12:45 o'clock at Mr. Ferdinand's city home, No. 453 Audubon road, Back Bay, by Rev. Charles L. Page, assistant pastor of the Dudley Street Baptist Church.

Immediate relatives and a few friends, including President Frederic W. Rugg of the National Rockland Bank of Roxbury and Mr. and Mrs. Victor Heath, were present. Mr. Heath is manager of Mr. Ferdinand's store. Other friends came to the reception following. Later in the afternoon the bridal couple started on an extended honeymoon tour, which is to include a visit to the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

Mr. Ferdinand secured from Chief Justice Bolster of the city court yesterday a permit for the marriage to take place without waiting for the five days ordinarily required to elapse between application for a license and ceremony. This morning Mr. Ferdinand and Mrs. Anderson secured their license at City Hall.

Mr. Ferdinand is President of the Roxbury Board of Trade, a life member of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, a former commodore of the South Boston Yacht Club, a Mason and member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company.

He is a widower. His first wife died twelve years ago.

He has a forty-seven-acre farm at Canton and a Summer home in Mt. Vernon, N. H., in addition to his city residence.

Mrs. Ferdinand's maiden name was Miss Anna L. Sinclair. Her girlhood home was in Wakefield. For several months she has been living at her mother's Brighton home.

Woman Runs Jitney Bus in Pawtucket

PAWTUCKET, R. I., March 23.—This city probably has the distinction of having the first woman jitney bus operator in New England, if not in the country, in Mrs. S. Edith Dohring. Her "jitney" is a five-passenger automobile, which she operates between Fair Lawn and Trinity square. She is the wife of Richard Dohring, an overseer in a mill.

Wants Pupils and Teachers Friends

Closer bonds of friendship should exist between teacher and pupils at Radcliffe, according to Gretchen Rasely '17 of Cambridge. She declares it's the undergraduates' fault that such an intimacy does not now exist.

"Who is to blame for the absence of such a bond at Radcliffe," Miss Rasely writes in the Radcliffe News: "We can't censure our professors for it. They are willing to talk to us if we talk to them. The fault seems to be ours."

Drop Flour and Bread Prices in Chicago

CHICAGO, March 23.—Bread prices are back to five cents a loaf and flour has dropped $1 a barrel in Chicago. Big bakers claimed the grocers refused to handle bread at six cents. Lower prices in wheat and the reduction on flour was responsible for the drop, according to bakers.

Overcome by Gas in a Barber Shop

James J. McAtter, forty-two, of No. 144 Tyler street, Boston, was found unconscious today from gas poisoning at a barber shop at No. 242 Bowdoin street, Dorchester, where he worked. The police believe he turned on the gas to heat water and forgot to light it. Tarsh Marsho, who lives next door, found McAtter sitting in a barber chair unconscious.

Women Like Pebeco

Practically all dental authorities agree that 95% of all tooth decay is caused by the "tearing-down" tactics of mouth acids on tooth enamel.

"My husband first brought Pebeco into our home. I thought it only a man's tooth paste. But a ten-day trial proved it in every way a woman's dentifrice as well. I'm delighted with it."

WHITNEY ILL, BIG FIGHT FOR PLACE

Captain Jophanus Whitney of the Massachusetts District Police lies critically ill at his home in Medford and the subordinates of his department are engaged in a bitter political fight for his position.

The condition is said to be unprecedented in the history of State affairs.

For several months Chief Whitney has battled on the thin line between life and death. The aged war veteran's condition is still serious, but he believes that he will recover and will return to again command the police department of the State.

While Chief Whitney has been struggling for his life the fight has been carried on for his position to the very door of the Governor's office. It was admitted at the Governor's office today that the "fight" for Chief Whitney's job began "almost the very day he was taken ill," and that "almost every member of the department is a candidate for the position."

Governor Walsh is said to be unfavorably impressed by the irony of the situation. He recently sent for Chief Whitney's son to learn first-hand his father's condition. It is said that his office has also been in communication with Chief Whitney's physician.

Governor Walsh has let it become known that if Chief Whitney recovers he certainly will be expected to return to his position. According to those who have visited the Executive Chamber recently, Governor Walsh has manifested his disapproval of the existing conditions, in which able-bodied policemen openly fight for the office of their chief, who lies helpless upon his sick bed.

Chief Whitney has been at the head of the district police about six years. Previously he was in the department about twenty years.

Aged Man Rescues Invalid at Blaze

MANCHESTER, N. H., March 23.—The life of Mrs. Earle D. McKewin, thirty-seven years old, an invalid, living with her father, Charles Shedd, at No. 222 Wellington avenue, was saved today in a morning fire when her aged father risked his life in going up a burning stairway in order to reach the room where his sick daughter was confined. Both daughter and father were burned around the neck and shoulders when they reached the first floor.

Washington Ball for Miss Slater Has Been Given Up

Washington society is upset because the 800 invitations issued by John R. McLean to an Easter Monday ball to be given in honor of Miss Esther Slater of Boston have been recalled. Miss Slater suffered a fall from her horse a week ago and her physicians advised she rest as much as possible.

The recall of the invitations was quite a disappointment as no host has been found to fill the breach. Miss Slater will marry Sumner Welles in Boston on April 14.

Income Inspectors to Resign to Make Room for Experts

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Partial re-organization of their investigating force has been decided upon by Secretary McAdoo and Internal Revenue Commissioner Osborne in planning for collection of the 1915 income tax. Some twenty special agents will be invited to resign, to be replaced by trained accountants, especially fitted to handle the books of corporations subject to the tax.

Commissioner Osborne spoke of weeding out this force in his annual report and indicated that the move is in line with plans to see that the income tax is paid by every individual and corporation subject to it.

JERSEY WOMAN WILLS HER HOME TO PET CATS AND DOGS

Her daughter, Mrs. Frederick C. Kelly, is asked to see that the wishes are carried out. The house is to be hot and always kept in repair. Mrs. Wright was wealthy and noted for her kindness to dumb animals.

The Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson, pastor of the church, officiated.

The pallbearers were George Duncan, Moorfield Storey, Major Henry L. Higginson, Francis L. Higginson, Colonel Charles F. Morse, Colonel Charles L. Pierson, James F. Rhodes and Worthington C. Ford.

How To Gain Flesh.

A simple but sure way to increase the weight, it is asserted by several well-known physicians, is to take regularly for several months, one or two 3 grain hypo-nuclane tablets after each meal. These little tablets have the distinguished merit of increasing the red and white blood corpuscles, aiding digestion and promoting assimilation and absorption of the elements in the food which go to make blood and solid tissues. They are obtainable in sealed packages from physicians and well stocked apothecary shops.—Advertisement.

NET PAID CIRCULATIONS

(Of Especial Interest to Merchants and Advertisers)

The Boston AMERICAN welcomes this opportunity of demonstrating its absolute supremacy in the local field on sworn net paid figures.

The Boston AMERICAN, both Evening and Sunday, goes into and stays in the homes.

There is some variation in the classifications of the three reports, as will be noted, but they are sufficiently identical to make comparisons interesting and significant.

An advertisement republished from the Boston Post of March 22, 1915.

Sworn Reports of The Boston Globe and The Boston Post to the Audit Bureau of Circulations for the Three Months ending Dec. 31, 1914

The Boston Globe publishes a detailed report of its Net Paid Circulation as made under Oath to the Audit Bureau of Circulations, for the three months ending December 31, 1914. This report is reproduced from the Globe exactly as printed, with the Globe's own comments. In adjoining columns is published the detailed report of the Net Paid Circulation of the Boston Post for the same period, also made under oath to the Audit Bureau of Circulations. There is some variation in the classificatons of the two reports, as will be noted, but they are sufficiently identical to make comparisons interesting and significant.

The Audit Bureau of Circulations is a National Organization of Advertisers and Newspapers, with headquarters at Chicago, the object of which is to furnish reliable statements of the number of copies actually sold and paid for. As both the Boston Globe and Boston Post allow a limited number of returns of unsold copies to newsdealers and newsboys, it is not possible for either paper to state accurately its actual Net Paid Circulation until a month or more after publication, as a large proportion of newsdealers settle their accounts on a monthly basis.

How You Can Quickly Remove Hairy Growths

(Aids to Beauty)

A well known beauty specialist advises this treatment for the removal of hair from the face. Mix into a paste some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after about 2 minutes rub off, wash the skin and every trace of hair has vanished. This method is quick and entirely safe. To avoid disappointment, however, it is well to make certain you get genuine delatone.—Advertisement.

PAINT STARTS WAR ON BOARD SHIP

Can the leopard change his spots
To look like what they ain't?
He might take a tip and try a dip
In a bathtub full of paint.
—Jungle Jingles.

A pot of paint and a pair of gloves started a little war on the deck of the good ship Orleans today, and before it had drawn to a finish one dark-skinned sailor's face had had its color changed to the whiteness of snow, and sailor and captain of the staunch ship bent their prows over to the East Boston police station and there preferred assault charges against one another.

The captain is John F. Rutledge of Medford. The Orleans is a four-masted schooner and is tied up at the National docks in East Boston.

Captain Rutledge decided to repaint the craft, and he hired Thomas Winfield, a colored sailor, and ordered the latter to do the decks over with nice white paint.

Later Rutledge noticed Winfield was doing the job with gloved hands. "Take 'em off," he said. "Who ever heard of painting with gloves on?"

This started something. Whatever did happen, Winfield's face was smeared all over with white paint, where the brush had been brought into contact with his countenance.

The police said something about a stick of wood being used in the melee.

In the East Boston court the case was continued until Thursday, the captain and sailor being each held in $200 bonds.

Leased Lines to Fight B. & M. Bill

CONCORD, N. H., March 23.—The New Hampshire Legislature will tomorrow begin consideration of the new Boston & Maine reorganization bill at a hearing called by Chairman Couch of the House Judiciary Committee.

The indications are the bill will not have an unqualified indorsement from the leased line stockholders, who opposed the original trustees' bill. Concord and Montreal stockholders are against any bill which aims to destroy the separate entity of the subsidiary roads.

One of the probabilities in the way of legislation in New Hampshire, regardless of what happens to the Boston & Maine reorganization bill, is a charter for the Merrimack Valley railroad. This will provide for combination of the roads operating in the Merrimack valley, in case the present leases to the Boston & Maine lapse for any reason. Concord and Montreal stockholders look for the Boston and Lowell, the Northern and other contiguous lines to come in with them to establish a through line from Boston to Montreal.

Zeppelins Watched by Mrs. Vanderbilt

LONDON, March 23.—Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Sr., who arrived here today, was one of those who risked their lives in Paris Sunday to watch the Zeppelins drop bombs over the French capital. "My daughter fairly dragged me into the cellar when the alarm was spread," said Mrs. Vanderbilt, "but I insisted upon seeing the airships and went to the garret. It was a wonderful sight."

Boston Letters in Girl's Osborne Suit
Miss Tanzer's Counsel Faces Contempt

Lawyer Must Produce Note in Court Today, Judge Insists.

NEW YORK, March 23.—Maxwell Slade, one of the attorneys for Miss Rae Tanzer, whose suit for $50,000 for alleged breach of promise against James W. Osborne gets more involved every day, is threatened with contempt proceedings by Judge Cushman of the Federal Criminal Court unless he produces today a letter submitted to him by Miss Helen Kaiser.

Judge Cushman treatened to jail Slade for contempt at 2 o'clock today unless the letter is produced or a stay secured by a writ of habeas corpus.

The letter is one believed to have been written by "Oliver Osborne of Boston," to Miss Kaiser, who made her appearance in the case recently. "Oliver Osborne of Boston," who appeared with the claim he was the 'Dear Oliver" of the letters on which Miss Tanzer bases her claims against James W. Osborne, has disappeared just as suddenly as he appeared.

Miss Kaiser told Slade, she says, that she knew "Oliver Osborne of Boston," and James Osborne was not her "Dear Oliver."

Maxwell Slade was subpoenaed before the Federal Grand Jury. Slade protested that as the case was that of the government against his client, he must plead counsel's privilege. He argued the letter was an important part of the evidence in his case. District Attorney Marshall haled him before Judge Cushman.

Many of the "Dear Oliver" letters, said to have been received by Miss Tanzer and Miss Kaiser, are understood to have been dated from Boston, and written on the stationery of the New England Steamship Company. These letters are claimed by the Federal district attorney's office to have been in the same handwriting.

District Attorney Marshall, in outlining his case against Miss Tanzer, of using the mails to defraud, on which charge she is under $5,000 security to stand trial next week, said:

"I would be glad if some one would bring Oliver Osborne in to me, for then our identification of him by several important witnesses would be complete. I think it possible that the man fears prosecution under the Mann white slave law. If this is what he is afraid of, I would like to call attention to the decision handed down some months ago in Kansas by United States Judge Pollock. The judge held that the law applied only to cases in which commercial activity could be established."

Brockton Teachers in Exchange Plan

Heirlooms Stolen from Boston Woman

Heirlooms valued at $6,000, including a diamond necklace, bracelet, earrings and rings, as well as $50 in cash, were stolen from Mrs. George B. Baird of Boston, at the Elks' club-house in San Bernardino, Cal., according to dispatches.

Rae Tanzer, whose $50,000 suit for alleged breach of promise against J. W. Osborne has developed new tangles.

Check the Symptoms of Lung Trouble

Symptoms of severe lung trouble, such as fever, night sweats and loss of weight, etc., should be checked, or serious results will follow. Eckman's Alterative has brought about many recoveries. Read this:

305 W. Thirty-sixth St., New York.

"Gentlemen—Since I was a very young woman I was a sufferer from Bronchitis. I tried doctor after doctor, getting little or no benefit. Finally I had night sweats, weak spells and lost rapidly in weight, and my doctor told me if they were not checked I would have Consumption. Miss Mary Korhamer, who is a friend of mine, recovered after taking your Alterative, and insisted that I try it. I am now, after two years, perfectly well, strong and healthy." (Abbreviated.)

(Affidavit) MRS. ROSA VOELPEL.

Eckman's Alterative is most efficacious in bronchial catarrh and severe throat and lung affections and upbuilding the system. Contains no harmful or habit-forming drugs. Accept no substitutes. Small size, $1; regular size, $2. Sold by leading druggists. Write for booklet of recoveries.

Keep Your Lungs Strong.

This advice is doubly important with the knowledge that every three minutes some one in the United States succumbs to consumption and many refuse to realize they are afflicted until it is too late.

It is after colds or sickness, from overwork, confining duties or when general weakness exists that tubercular germs thrive because the resistive powers of the body are weakened.

Only fresh air, sunshine and abundant rich blood can hope to arrest their progress and the concentrated fats in Scott's Emulsion furnish fuel for rich blood, and its rare nourishment helps strengthen the lungs while it builds up the forces.

If you work indoors, tire easily, feel languid or run-down, Scott's Emulsion is the most strengthening food-medicine known and is free from alcohol or stupefying drug. Avoid substitutes.

Meningitis Germ Attacks Doctor Who Isolated It

TRENTON, N. J., March 23.—A victim of the deadly meningitis germ, which, after years of patient research, he himself isolated, Dr. Frederick Hammond of the staff of the New Jersey State Hospital is now a patient at the hospital. Prompt application by Dr. Harry A. Cotton, medical director of the institution, of a treatment for the scourge which Dr. Hammond discovered, saved the patient's life, but he is now a maniac.

Report Miss Page to Wed Loring in Fall

UNEMPLOYED TO PARADE SUNDAY

A parade of the unemployed through the principal streets of Boston is being planned for Sunday by the committee in charge of the "Hotel de Jobless." Already plans have been made for a mass meeting of those out of work on the Common Saturday.

These demonstrations have been arranged so as to show the citizens of Boston how many persons are really unemployed.

Jeff Davis, manager of the New York "Hotel de Gink," and who is known as the "King of Hoboes," has been ostracised from the Boston unemployed band. The doors of the "Hotel de Jobless" at the corner of Essex street and Harrison avenue have been closed to him.

According to those in charge of the "Hotel de Jobless," Jeff Davis visited the hotel Sunday afternoon and evening to look things over. They claim he said lovely things about the work and the place, and then went straight to the newspapers and said the place was no good.

"Evidently Davis was inspired by some jealous motive, or else he has been induced by some of the interests who are trying to stop the work here to take up the cudgels for them," says Cotel F. Howard. "Some people believe that he expected when he arrived here to gain control of the local hotel, as he is expected to be ousted from his Hotel de Gink job in New York. Failing in this he vented his spite on the place."

Boston Steamer Is Halted by Shot

The New England Coal & Coke Company's steamer Newton of Boston, while passing out of New York was stopped by a shot from the Dolphni. The failure of the Newton to display signals, despite warnings given by the whistles of the Dolphin and the naval tug Narkeeta, resulted in the shot being thrown across the steamer's bow.

MME. SCHWIMMER PLEADS FOR PEACE

"America has lost her opportunity to be the great leader and arbitrator in world peace," declares Mme. Roseka Schwimmer, who leads tonight's peace meeting at Tremont Temple.

"The women of Europe are disenchanted waiting for the United States to act and have now called an international peace meeting to be held at The Hague April 28, 29 and 30. Although official America is unable to take steps, her people, and especially her women, will take part at The Hague, and Jane Addams, foremost among peace advocates, has been asked to preside.

"We women of Europe can stand conditions no longer; we simply must do something—this fratricidal struggle must stop. We are going to do our part to cause a pause, at least in hostilities.

"The European Peace Party was founded after the war began by women from Germany, England and Belgium. We recognize no reasons for this war that may not be settled amicably if the leaders will but pause long enough to talk things over.

"I know and thousands of European women know there is little animosity between many of the soldiers in the trenches, who are known to have signals warning their opponents when they are going to fire."

With the advent of Mme. Schwimmer in Boston, there is a story that Boston women, under her leadership, are back of a movement to send a "peace ship" to Europe, loaded with American women, who are to plead with the crowned heads of Europe to stop the war.

Mrs. Glendower Evans, who is actively interested in the movement, says:

"A conference of women, in which it is hoped that every one of the belligerent countries will be represented, is to be held at The Hague April 27. There these women will council together on this stop-the-war proposition. Mme. Schwimmer has asked me to go with her, and I intend to go."

The "peace ship" will sail about April 17 or earlier, so as to bring its women peace pleaders to The Hague by the 27th. Jane Addams of Hull House intends to go if she can arrange her affairs for such an absence. Mrs. Fannie Fern Andrews, president of the American School Peace League; Mrs. John J. White of Washington, Mrs. Louis F. Post, also of Washington and Mrs. Anna Garlin Spencer has already signified their intention of joining the "peace ship" party.

DRESS WARM AND KEEP FEET DRY

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Take Salts and Get Rid of Uric Acid.

Rheumatism is no respecter of age, sex, color or rank. If not the most dangerous of human afflictions, it is one of the most painful. Those subject to rheumatism should eat less meat, dress as warmly as possible, avoid any undue exposure, and, above all, drink lots of pure water.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.—Advertisement.

Fire Leaves Second Oldest House in the U. S. in Mass of Ruins

The original part of the old Crowe house at Plymouth, that was built in 1664 and which is the second oldest house in the United States, is today a mass of ruins as the result of a fire.

The loss to Plymouth is considered great, as the old eli was an object of great interest to visitors.

The Crowe house was built by William Crowe and remained in the possession of his descendants until several years ago, when it was purchased by William Bagen.

The house had many traditions and one usually told tourists was the story of a bull that wandered into the house one day and, seeing its reflection in the old-fashioned mirror there, charged, not only through the mirror, but through the partition itself.

Pawtucket Man Fatally Burned

PAWTUCKET, R. I., March 23.—Hamilton Rice, forty-two, proprietor of the Pattern Letter Company, was probably fatally burned today when his clothes caught fire in his factory. Enveloped in flames he ran into the street, where Andrew Thresher, a mail carrier, beat out the fire with a mail pouch.

THOMAS R. TIGHE DIES IN VERMONT

Charlestown people who knew Thomas R. Tighe a generation ago but who had not heard from him in years read with interest today of his death at St. Johnsbury, Vt. It was through this news of his death that Tighe was revealed as the former Charlestown man whose family was socially prominent and who was widely known among Bostonians.

Tighe was found dead Saturday in a room in a bank building at St. Johnsbury. In his clothing the police found $1,600 in cash, two diamonds worth several hundred dollars and several bankbooks. The police said he had lived alone in the room since going to St. Johnsbury six months ago to live.

Tighe lived in Charlestown up to twenty odd years ago. He was one of three brothers. One was Charles Tighe who died some years ago, and the other is Captain George Tighe, who is now in business in New York, where he is captain of a company of militia. This brother married a Troy, N. Y., society girl, and several years ago took his militia company to Charlestown to participate in a Bunker Hill Day parade.

As a youth Thomas Tighe gained some repute as a pianist. He married Miss Nellie O'Brien, a beautiful Charlestown girl. Later she divorced him. Tighe became pianist at a Boston theatre, became resident manager of a theatre in Providence, fought in the Spanish-American war and later entered the moving picture business.

He has a cousin on the Boston police force and another cousin lives in Newburyport.

"BUSINESS IS BOOMING," SAYS W. A. VARNEY HIRES EXTRA HELP—ORDERS FOR MORE THAN 50,000 BOTTLES LAST WEEK

Tremendous Demand for Var-ne-sis, Extending From Coast to Coast, Proves Merit of Rheumatic Remedy.

It has been said if a man ever discovered a remedy for rheumatism he would not be able to supply the demand; this is my condition at the present time, said W. A. Varney, the proprietor of Var-ne-sis.

The Eastern Drug Company of Boston, Mass., sent an order in last week for 60 gross or 8640 bottles, to be delivered immediately. Other orders this same week totalled up to more than 50,000 bottles. The reason for the tremendous sale of Var-ne-sis can be expressed in one little short word—Merit. Hundreds of people in Boston and vicinity have recovered their health through Var-ne-sis after suffering many years with rheumatism and rheumatic arthritis. These people have told others what the remedy has done for them and thus this personal advertising spread from one sufferer to another. I have often remarked if the people knew the true worth of Var-ne-sis there wouldn't be a home in the country without a bottle.

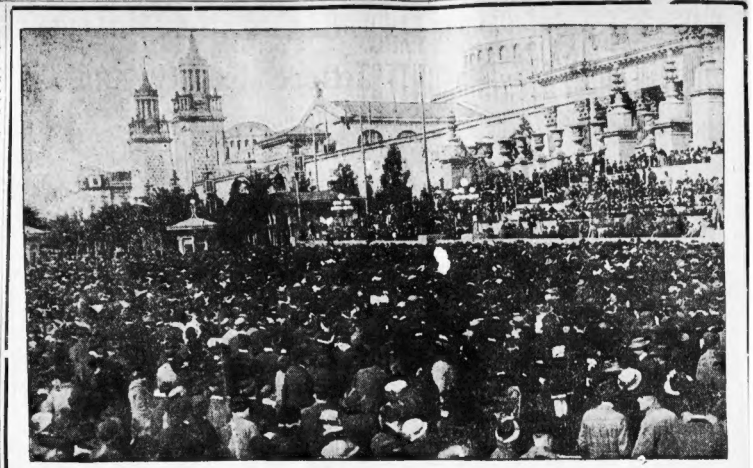

And that strong reason for the success of my business is that the foundation has been built, stone by stone, on Truth and Merit, but the truth. I am justly proud of the reputation I have that no exaggeration or misleading statement ever appears over my name, and by the way the orders are coming in the public has proved it has implicit confidence in any statement I make. This foundation can withstand the wildest attack of selfish interests in a court of law or elsewhere, and is unassailable by skeptic or scoffer.

I have repeatedly offered to pay the expenses of three business men to investigate the truth of any letters or statements published under my name, providing they would allow me to publish the results of their investigation. I have repeatedly offered $1000 if these letters were not genuine or that they had been purchased. My only crime is advertising—telling the public what Var-ne-sis has done for this man and that woman, perhaps your next door neighbor.

I emphatically state I have a remedy in Var-ne-sis which has been successful in the treatment of rheumatism and rheumatic arthritis—I ask You, a sufferer from this disease, to investigate Var-ne-sis for your own interest; it is more important for you to take Var-ne-sis than it is for me to sell it. I am particularly interested in sufferers from rheumatism who have been treated month after month, year after year, without success; these are the people I am sending this message out to. I want them to send to me for the 32-page booklet and newspaper. Direct your request to me personally, W. A. Varney, Lynn, Mass. It describes case after case that had been treated for months and years, growing worse all the time; finally through taking Var-ne-sis they were able to return to work. Can you blame me for being enthusiastic when I know I have a remedy that has conquered this cursed disease? No rheumatic sufferer can afford to ignore Var-ne-sis. Remember, Var-ne-sis is perfectly harmless, being composed of vegetable substances. It does not contain salicylates of soda, colchicum, bismuth, wintergreen, potash or narcotics.

My new quarters at 140 Bowdoin street, Boston, are open to the public to inspect the large collection of wheel chairs, crutches, canes, photographs, letters, etc. The Var-ne-sis physician is in attendance—advice free—no medicine is sold, his chief duty being to tell you whether or not you have rheumatism.

Get Var-ne-sis Now, today, at Riker-Jaynes and other reliable druggists.

The contest begins Saturday, March 27, 1915, and ends Saturday, July 3, 1915.

THE PRIZES—Twenty-five Trips to Los Angeles to the California Expositions and FIFTY DOLLARS in gold to each of the 25 trip winners will be awarded.

THE ENROLLMENT—Every candidate must be regularly enrolled from his or her permanent address on the enrollment blank printed in the Boston American Daily and Sunday or a copy thereof.

THE VOTES—Every day during the life of the contest, beginning Saturday, March 27, 1915, and ending Saturday, July 3, 1915, a coupon will appear in the Daily and Sunday American which will count for votes.

The Daily American coupon will count ONE vote and the Sunday American coupon will count TEN votes.

The contest will be divided into 7 periods, and the coupons, during each period, will be numbered in series as follows:

1st period—Series A No. 1 to A No. 15—appearing March 27 to April 10
2d period—Series B No. 1 to B No. 15—appearing April 11 to April 25
3d period—Series C No. 1 to C No. 15—appearing April 26 to May 10

But in any event all the coupons must be turned in within the set time limit. For example: ALL (A) coupons must be turned in not later than 5 P. M., April 17. ALL (A) coupons received after this date and time will be refused; a similar rule applies to the other six SERIES.

Votes sent in daily during each period will count only for their face value.

Do the same with "Series A No. 2" coupons, and the same with "Series A No. 3, 4, 5" and so on up to and including "Series A No. 15," the last one of that series. WANT TO SEE THE PANAMA FAIR? JOIN AMERICAN'S VOTING CONTEST

The Proud Pa of this Happy Family spends his evenings in the Home circle, occupying the Easy Chair in the dining room after the suppers dishes have been cleared away, the light streaming upon his paper from over his Left shoulder just as the family's "Commonsense Science" had told him to sit while reading.

In the rocker, Facing the light and Pa, sits the equally proud Ma, busily knitting for the men in the Trenches and pausing only when she hears her Helpmeet exclaim something about Zeps or stumbling over tongue-defying names like Przemysl and its first cousin Przasnysz, in the latest Word on the War.

Pa reads the news Avidly, and never forgets to Politely pass the Paper to Ma so that she may with equal Avidity study all the Advertisements.

And when the Children come home from the Movies, Pa is always There with two Paternal ears to listen to their gush of the Feature Fillums they had seen and which they with true Filial feeling tell and Re-tell in all the Delightful Detail for his benefit—and Ma's.

If little Mary Butts in while Bill Our Eldest and named after his Father is depicting in graphic style some Special fillum, Pa's eyes will turn to Mary, which means that she has the Floor. Then, too, if Sister Susie comes to the Bat with some Fact which the rest had missed in the recital, Pa gives her his ear, for he had raised the Flock with rare Parental Impartiality, and Pa believed in Petting his children as little as he did in Sparing the Rod (but he never Overdid the Rod's use, —as the little used Cat-o'-Nine-Tails hanging in the Pantry could give Mute Proof).

THE GREAT SHOW.

Came the Fateful Night.

Pa had Passed the Magazine pages to Ma and he was on the last Lap of the war Stuff when, with many a Merry sound, in romped the Children, fresh arrived from the Movies.

"Oh, Pa, we just saw the Grandest fillum ever," cheerily chirruped Sister Sue.

"A Corker, Ma," put in Bill the Firstborn.

"Oh, so pretty, Pa," said little Mary.

"Featured as the 'Eighth Wonder of the World,' Ma, and it looked it, for I never saw sights more gorgeous," went on Bill.

"Oh, it was just lovely, Pa," came back Sister Sue.

"Well, what was it?" inquired the beaming Ma.

"Movies of the great Panama-Pacific International Exposition," answered the Children.

"Oh," said Pa, with Interest showing Plain on his Honest Face.

"Oh," said Ma, ditto.

"Big buildings, Ma, and thousands of people, oceans of sightseers, all so happy, and all on the go, sights beautiful to behold," said Bill. "The thing of a lifetime. I'd give ANYTHING to see the Fair, Ma."

"Me, too," chimed in little Mary.

"Oh, Pa, it would be the Grandest thing if we could all go," said Sue.

"Really, children, I'd give ten years of my life to be able to take you all—all," said Pa, and a tear came to his eye.

"But there's no use Talking about the Impossible, Children, so tell Ma, and me what else you saw," added Pa.

JOKE ON DAD.

"Pa, you make me 'Tired,'" announced Ma.

The Children looked Puzzled, then Curious.

"What do you mean, Ma?" queried Bill.

"The joke is on your Dad," said Ma, In a matter of fact, every day sort of a way.

"On me?" from Pa.

"Just so," said Ma, with Finality, as they say in the Books.

"How so?" asked Pa.

"We're going to the Fair at 'Frisco if work and Determination can do it," declared Ma, with equal Finality.

"You've got my Goat, Ma, I confess," said Pa. "Do tell how you think you are going to do it? On my wages? It's about eaten up weekly as things are, and what we save has to go to pay for our Home. You've got me guessing, Ma, I admit."

"It's easy," said Ma. "Absolutely not one cent of money is needed."

"I don't get you, my Dear," replied Pa.

"Nor do we, Ma, pray tell us how," said Bill, as spokesman for the Children.

"Read your Paper a little more Carefully, Pa, and you would Find out," said Ma.

And without more Ado, Ma indicated with her knitting needle a big "ad" in the Family's Daily copy of the Boston AMERICAN.

"That explains how we are going to take in the Fair," she said, with more Finality than ever.

And then Pa read, the Children peeking over his shoulders, or in the case of little Mary, tiptoeing at his side and doing her level best to read Every Line of the Print.

THE LIGHT DAWNS.

And what Pa read made him open his eyes in Wonderment.

And the Children, too.

And Ma just continued Sitting, and Smiling.

"Didn't I tell you so?" said she.

Then Pa read aloud:

The Boston AMERICAN Offers

25 De Luxe Trips Free

To California and the Fairs

in a Voting Contest Open to

Every Man, Woman and Chilg in

New England—

And Pa read the rest of the "ad," which you will find in your today's AMERICAN, where it tells the details of how opportunity faces YOU in cost-free trips to the World's Greatest Exposition, where all the expenses are paid by the AMERICAN, for the twenty-five winners in the Boston AMERICAN'S California Expositions Contest.

"Ma, I'm on," said Pa, with more than Ma's Finality. "We'll do it."

And forthwith, Ma, Pa, Bill, little Mary and Sister Sue made ready to start in the AMERICAN'S great contest, the details of which are told in a big "ad" in this paper, and the first vote coupon in which appears next Saturday, March 27.

YES, A MORAL.

"And," as Ma went on to say, "there's a Moral."

Here it is;

Moral.—Read the Boston AMERICAN. Enter the Contest. And then Begin Working.

"Ma" and "Pa" mean ANY parents ANYWHERE in New England. What they can do, YOU fathers and mothers can do.

The Children are ANY children ANYWHERE in New England.

What they can do, YOU children can do.

So let your slogan be:

Death Reveals Mill "Hand" Woman

CHICOPEE, March 22.—The fact that she could earn more money by doing a man's work is believed to have been the reason Miss Florestine Albertine Beaudoin, forty-five, for twenty years superintendent at Albert Beaudoin in Williamsett, Death has just revealed her secret.

After doing her customary tasks as a mill hand in a Holyoke paper mill, the woman went to the home of a sister, Mrs. H. LaChapelle, in Williamsett, to assist in moving some furniture. She backed a delivery wagon up against the rear porch and started to load it with furniture.

A little later a policeman noticed the figure of a man leaning against the body of the woman as if ill. He offered his assistance, but was refused. Some time after another man passed the house and saw the "man" lying on the ground. Medical help was summoned, but the "man" died before it arrived. Mrs. LaChapelle was the only one who knew "Albert's" identity.

Open Radcliffe Political Bureau

Future Senators, or mayhaps even an occupant of the presidential chair, are offered opportunity to imbibe the latest political "dope" in the information bureau now opened at Radcliffe. Dorothea U. Whitney is in charge of the bureau, which is conducted under the supervision of the Civics Club. She says:

"The presidents of the political clubs will hold office hours there. Material and reference books for the peace debate and for general chapter information are also to be kept there, and who knows but what some future Senators may have received their first inspiration from information gleaned from our Civics Room."

WASHINGTON, March 23. — The treasury deficit at the close of the fiscal year will not be as large as has been estimated in some quarters, in the view of President Wilson. The executive stated to callers today that he believed Senator Simmons' estimate of $26,000,000 deficit would be much closer to the fact than any other forecast.

Brockton Forum Is for Milk Bill

At the last meeting of the Brockton Forum, 900 members advocated the passage of the bill now pending in the Legislature for better inspection of dairies and making it illegal to sell milk handled under unhealthy conditions.

John P. Meade of Brockton, a member of the legislative Committee of the American Federation of Labor, referred to the Winthrop Board of Health, where the committee undertook to inspect dairies, but stopped when the first contractor approached submitted a list of 1,500 dairies for inspection.

Recipe to Stop Dandruff

This Home Made Mixture Stops Dandruff and Falling Hair and Aids Its Growth.

To a half-pint of water add:

Bay Rum ..... 1 oz.
Barbo Compound ..... a small box
Glycerine ..... ½ oz.

These are all simple ingredients that you can buy from any druggist at very little cost, and mix them yourself. Apply to the scalp once a day for two weeks, then once every other week until all the mixture is used. A half-pint should be enough to rid the head of dandruff and kill the dandruff germs. It stops the hair from falling out, relieves itching and scalp diseases.

Although it is not a dye, it acts upon the hair roots and will darken streaked, faded, gray hair in ten or fifteen days. It promotes the growth of the hair and makes harsh hair soft and glossy.

RAMONA BORDEN IS POSTED BY FATHER

Gail Borden, the multi-millionaire milk dealer of New York, whose daughter Ramona, seventeen, was found in a Boston hotel following her disappearance from a New Jersey sanitarium two years ago, has repudiated the debts of his wife and daughter, according to dispatches received today from Los Angeles.

Newspapers in Los Angeles print the following notice:

To Whom it May Concern: Notice is hereby given that the undersigned will not be responsible for any debts contracted by Mrs. Gail (Helen M.) Borden, or by Miss Ramona Borden, his daughter.

GAIL BORDEN.

For several years the family affairs of the Bordens have been before the California courts. Four months ago Mrs. Borden was granted a divorce. Shortly after her mother secured an interlocutory decree Ramona, who is known as "the poor little rich girl," went to live with her mother in Los Angeles, and stated that she had run away from her father.

While detectives were searching the country two years ago for some trace of Ramona Borden, following her disappearance from the New Jersey sanitarium, she quietly spent a week at the Hotel Vendome. Finally she was found and her father took her back to New York with him.

At that time she said: "People say I am rich, but that does not mean I am happy. Daughters of rich people are not always happy."

Bankers to Hold Wool for American Mills

REPORT FORMER COLLECTOR SHORT

Watertown voters are discussing today the statement read at the town meeting by Selectman W. Harvey Lucas, in which it was stated that the resignation on February 1 of Joseph B. Holland, collector of taxes, was due to a shortage in his accounts.

Mr. Lucas said the accounts are now being audited and that it appears the shortage will be smaller than the amount of the collector's bond, so that the town will suffer no loss. A canvass is being made to determine how many citizens have paid their taxes without being credited.

After the hours of discussion, during which the lie was passed, charges and counter charges were made and the office of the Board of Health was characterized as "rotten," the town meeting adjourned at midnight to tomorrow night.

P. S. Cunniff criticised the quarters of the health board. He declared the agent's office, the agent's desk and, in fact, the whole establishment and the board itself are "rotten," asserting that "you can't see out of the windows."

Thomas W. Wishart, agent of the board, retorted that the appropriations for the board is not large enough to pay for having the windows washed. Referring to the future prospects, Mr. Wishart announced that Henry H. Thurlow had come to him and told him that he (Wishart) would be the right man for agent of the board.

Here Mr. Thurlow entered the lists by characterizing the last statement by the "shorter and uglier word."

Dr. David is a graduate of Brown University and studied theology at the Newton Theological School. He was born in Persia and three years ago came here upon his furlough.

Men and Women

The Little Things That Make or Mar Married Life

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

I AM sure that knowing how to treat a husband is far more important than dancing or bridge, but not half so much instruction is given on the subject!

The first year of married life is—we are told—always a particularly difficult period to tend. It is part of a woman's "job" to make a success of her marriage. The man earns the wherewithal that makes marriage possible. His partner is his wife—the more successfully his wife, the more she is his partner. And her end of the responsibility is not only to make the home—but to make the marriage worthy the name.

The very first thing that a successful wife must remember is that it is easier for a man to give way in big things than in little ones. If an important decision is at stake and you talk it over with him, he is open to conviction and (if he is a gentleman) ready to make the sacrifice or concession once he is convinced of his rightfulness of so doing.

But as for little things a man is not constructed to remember them. He does not feel or see the wrinkle in the lining of his shoe. A woman sees the point in trifles and feels it too.

Just make up your mind to endure masculine carelessness in little matters—to endure forgetting and not to make yourself miserable about it if the man you love does over and over again the particular trick that drives you nearly insane. He would not do it if he remembered. If he were another woman he could appreciate how you feel about it. But he must be to the end of life merely a man—and so he will never be able to comprehend that you mind or why you mind.

In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, he will say with utter amazement each time the bone of contention appears on the family dinner table, "Why, dear, if I had known that it made any special difference to you whether I wore a red tie or not, I never would have bought any but black ones." And he will no more know why you object to his wearing red ties than you will know why he doesn't know!

Men are conscious that the comfort of life depends on little things. Through long generations women have been managing and looking out for ease of men in the creature comforts of home life. The sense of perception about the importance of having delicious muffins for breakfast every Sunday morning goes after a dozen Sundays of having them.

If they do not appear on the menu on the thirteenth Sunday John may growl a bit—but about the fifteenth Sunday he is likely to forget that he ever had anything more thrilling set before him than toast. And if the muffins again appear, he may complain of the lack of toast. Men are creatures of habit, but they are not creatures who analyze how the habits were formed.

Trifles make up the life of any woman who has not gone out into the world to fight it on the basis of big things rather than trifles. And since our mothers and grandmothers back through countless generations were home-makers rather than wage-earners, we are naturally and instinctively and by inheritance dealers in trifles rather than in the big facts of fighting the world.

By some inscrutable law of Providence, not one man in a thousand has any consciousness of trifles. The thousandth part is a nervous, petty sort of creature who may remember that we like yellow roses and detested red ones, but he could not steer us through a crowded street on the way to a football game or get us out of an excursion rush or make us feel safe just to be with him in a panic in the subway.

Any woman's future comfort is likely to depend on her schooling herself not to care because John forgets his wedding anniversary year after years—and never sends her flowers when she is sick. A manly man is fairly sure to neglect your tastes in little things.

A Blackhander

Mrs. Sam Tyle met her dearest friend, Mrs. George Reen, in the street.

"How lucky to meet you!" gushed Mrs. S. Tyle. "I'm—er—we want another maid; there is too much work for two. So I'm looking for a parlor maid."

Mrs. G. Reen hid her envy under a smiling face.

"How strange!" she gushed back. "I think I know the very girl for you. And I can recommend her personally, because she's leaving us next week."

Mrs. S. Tyle darted a suspicious look at her friend.

"But—er—why are you—er—getting rid of her?" she demanded.

Mrs. G. Reen smiled coolly.

"Oh, she's given me notice, dear!" she said, with well-assumed frankness. "You see, she complains that there is too much silver to clean at our house. So I know she'll just suit you!"

IOWA WOMAN TELLS OTHERS

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Carried Her Safely Through Change of Life.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa.—"At the Change of Life the doctor said I would have to give up my work and take my bed for some time as there was no help for me but to lie still. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and kept up my work and now I am over the Change and that is all I took. It was better for me than all the doctor's medicine I tried. Many people have no faith in patent medicines, but I know this is good."—Mrs. E. J. RICKETS, 354 8th Avenue, West, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

We ask anyone to name even one other medicine that has been so successful in relieving woman's suffering as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Their Married Life

Warren and Helen Get a Night View of the Jamaica Metropolis

Copyright, 1910, by International News Service.

"WARREN, it looks like a picture out of a story book," said Helen ecstatically, as she leaned over the rail and fixed her eyes on the shores of Jamaica slowly coming nearer. All day they had been sailing close to land, with the mountains rising directly out of the water and now as the sun was sinking they were landing at Kingston, Jamaica. Everything had seemed like a dream to Helen since that morning. The pilot in his little boat, who was guiding them into the harbor, the shores with their waving palm trees, the tiny thatched houses and the misty quiet heat, everything seemed strange and nothing was natural.

"We'll go down to dinner now," put in Warren, "so as to get ashore early. Too bad we got in so late; we won't see much of the town."

"Come, dear," said Helen, catching hold of Winifred's hand.

"Are we going on shore?" was Winifred's query.

Helen laughed. "Yes, we're going on shore. And you mustn't be frightened if you see lots of little negroes, will you?"

Winifred nodded vigorously to the effect that she would scorn being frightened, and a moment later they were seated at the table and Warren was ordering hurriedly. "Some coffee, and hurry that order, will you?" to the waiter. "Look," turning suddenly to the window, "children diving for pennies." And sure enough the boat had docked and the people were tossing coins to the children, who thronged the wharves. They were diving without a moment's hesitation.

Winifred was for making away from the table, but Warren reproved her sharply. She flushed all over her sensitive little face and Helen, although she said nothing, felt for the child. Winifred was very sensitive, like herself, and Warren disliked the fact that Helen was bringing her up to fear his reproofs.

"She's got to know right from wrong whether it hurts her or not," he had said once when Helen had spoken to him about the way he had punished Winifred. And after that Helen had endured his discipline of the child in silence. Now she thought he had spoken unnecessarily harsh, but she did not notice the incident and smiled at her small daughter when she asked how long they were going to be off the big ship.

ONLY A LITTLE WHILE OFF THE BIG SHIP

"Only a little while; we'll come back and go to bed on the boat."

"Better hurry," Warren put in; we want to have as much time as possible." Helen finished her meal hastily and they went up on deck and walked off the gangplank on to the wharf.

The wharf was crowded with people, and Warren hailed one of the carriages and they drove up the principal street, which was almost dark, and the stores were nearly all closed. Here and there a light gleamed out and it was very hot and muggy.

"Where are we going dear?" said Helen as they turned into a brightly lighted place and drove up a curving driveway.

"Up to the hotel. I don't know anything else we can do, it's dark now," Warren paid the driver and they got out and went into the hotel. In the back there was a garden filled with palm and cocoanut trees where different people were strolling and having cooling drinks. They sat down at a table and a waiter came and took their order. All around them the dark brooded, thick and mysterious, a regular tropic darkness, and Helen rejoiced in the unreality of it all.

"What's the matter, don't you like it?" said Warren looking at her closely.

"Like it, why dear, I think it is simply wonderful, only I can't believe I'm here."

They finished their drinks and Warren paid the checks.

"There's nothing to see in the town," he remarked; "shall we sit here for a while, or would you rather walk?"

"I want to walk a little; we may be able to see something."

CHILDREN TRY TO SELL MEMENTOES TO THEM

They strolled out into the street. The houses with their quaint porches extending out over the sidewalks fascinated Helen.

"Why, Warren, we are walking through people's property," she protested, and he laughed.

Winifred's steps lagged after a little, and as they passed a lighted saloon Warren looked at his watch. At the same moment someone came out, any they had a glimpse of a gayly-dressed young mulatto waiting on half a dozen men inside. Helen exclaimed.

"That's a common occurrence," said Warren. "It's nearly 9. Shall we go back to the hotel or drive down to the ship?"

"We might as well go back," and Helen realized that she was tired as they climbed into a carriage and drove off.

On the wharf they were accosted by dozens of children, who clamored to sell their wares. Brightly colored beads in long strings, baskets of tangerines, colored postcards, everything that one could think of, and Warren good-naturedly bought some beads and tossed a couple of coins to the boys, who picked them up eagerly.

The ship was almost deserted, and after putting Winifred to bed Helen and Warren on deck. The steward had brought up a plate of sandwiches, and Warren was drinking ginger ale. Another glass stood on the end of her chair, and she picked it up and helped herself to some sandwiches. The sky was thickly powdered with stars, and with a little throb of joy Helen realized that she was actually in the tropics. How dear it was of Warren to take the trouble of bringing her along.

(Another incident in the journey of Warren and Helen will appear here soon.)

Do You Know That—

A novel method of finding longitude lately tried by Professor Lindman, the Dutch astronomer, is the comparison of simultaneous photographs of the sky taken at two stations. The result being shown by an artificial star, the difference in the places of natural stars very accurately indicates the difference in longitude, and if the longitude of one place is known that of the other can be found with an uncertainty claimed to be only a few feet—perhaps ten or fifteen.

Brussels boasts the largest soup kitchen in the world. Nearly 50,000 entirely destitute people wait in the queues every day, and over 8,000 gallons of soup and four and one-half tons of bread are distributed. More than one hundred are engaged in the preparation of the soup.

Typical wheat farms in Australia extend over 5,000 acres, and are usually worked single-handed, by the farmer and his family, labor-saving machinery being used in every possible direction.

Spinach was introduced into England early in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, as also was the cucumber, while celery was introduced to English tables by a French prisoner in 1704.

Club Life in Flamingo Land

Queer Birds, Whose Tongues the Roman Epicures Greatly Prized

Flamingoes as they appear in their haunts in the Bahamas.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

IF YOU want to look at one of nature's oddest freaks in animal life go to the American Museum of Natural History in New York, and ask to be shown the way to the "Flamingo Group." There, in a large recess, at the corner of two hallways, Mr. Frank M. Chapman has reproduced, in the most realistic fashion, a scene in the Bahama Islands which is so strange that you might imagine that it was a view encountered, somewhere in his wanderings, by Sinbad the Sailor, but not a part of the wide-awake world.

It is a vast city of what, in spite of their outlandish forms and attitudes, you recognize as birds, whose legs are like stilts, whose necks are like rubber stretchers, whose beaks are like nothing in the world, and whose bodies flame with amazing color, a light vermilion, varied with harmonious tints. Away before you, apparently for a mile, the extraordinary spectacle stretches, down to the edge of the bay, or lagoon, beyond which runs a long, curved coast, backed behind with nodding palms, and a mass of tropical vegetation. High in the air a mile-long line of flamingoes in flight forms a chain of great triangles traced against the sky, after the geometrical habit of these queer birds. The realism is astonishing. You have to search carefully before you can trace the shadowy lines where the modeled foreground, with its set figures, blends into the painted background, and produces an illusion of profound perspective, which ought to teach you never to believe your eyes unless their evidence is corroborated.

No doubt a flamingo does not seem to itself, or to its fellow creatures, to be a freak or a joke. It has a perfectly natural feeling. If it could see its enormous, scoop-shovel beak, its wire-drawn legs, its little, chucky, goose-like body, and its endless twist of a neck, in a looking-glass it would find nothing funny about them at all. It stands on its nest of dried mud, in shape like the stump of a tree, with the greatest gravity and patience, sometimes on one leg, sometimes on two, and sometimes unrolling its neck and letting its head down four or five feet, to give something to the baby, or to gobble something from the ground, with the top of its head turned downward, on account of the curious bend in the big beak, which looks as if its back were broken.

By careful observation naturalists are usually able to discern the reason why Nature has given such extraordinary and fantastic forms to some of her creatures, but they can never drive away the impression that she has been, in many cases, a rule-of-thumb worker, trying experiments often in a very eccentric way, and getting at what she wanted hastily and clumsily.

Because the flamingo was destined to live partly in the water, at least to seek its food there, it manifestly had to have long wading legs; but those it has received look as if they had been inserted as an afterthought into the body of an animal at first intended to be a goose. Having to scoop up its food, little fishes, worms, crustaceans, mollusks, from water and mud, it had to have a different beak, but then, what an awkward-looking thing Nature made of it. And what an undignified attitude she compelled the flamingo to assume, in turning its head upside down in order to get its food! But she looked out very carefully for the mechanical details, making the wonderful beak like a sieve, so that the mud and water can run out while the little animals are held fast.

The flamingo is said to be intermediate in organization between the duck and the stork. There are six species, distributed in warm countries all over the world. Flamingoes were formerly very common in Florida. They live in large communities and breed in numbers and modes, making their nests of mud, in which the eggs are laid, and where the female bird hatches them out by sitting on them.

The birds migrate in flocks, and always fly in lines having a triangular shape, or that of a string of triangles. How did the birds get that Euclidian bent? Of course it has a purpose. Perhaps the bends in the line enable those in the rear to keep the leaders more easily in view. These curving lines of flight are almost the only graceful thing about the flamingo, except that its feathers are attractive.

The change of policy at the Shawmut Theatre [illegible] Hill avenue has [illegible] to make it the most popular playhouse in that section. The feature for the first three days of the week is "The Thief," with Dorothy Donnelly in the title part. As an added feature for the last four days Paul Panzer, the villian of "The Perils of Pauline," will appear in an interesting sketch.

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Otis Skinner [illegible] years has been [illegible] as one of the few really fine American actors at present before the public. We have seen him in a succession of romantic plays topped by [illegible]

[illegible] Last [illegible] ing from [illegible] tion, usually very distinguished, anything but clear. Despite this handicap [illegible] found impression [illegible] of Montgomery Starr.

Starr in "The Silent Voice" is a [illegible] markable musician. When the play opens his relatives and friends are unable to understand a change that [illegible] over [illegible]. He soon [illegible] to an old friend who has just returned from [illegible] abroad, Mildred Hillary, a part played by Mrs. Skinner.

He has been stricken with deafness, like his master, Beethoven, and in his resentment at his faith he has become an atheist. Mildred influences him to a different viewpoint and the end of the act finds him sufficiently reconciled to his fate so that he proposes and is accepted by his ward, a role played by Florence Fisher. The play now moves more rapidly. The wife is young and gay and not always content with her lot. Montgomery learns with great rapidity to read lips. Soon he is an expert. He can even ascend to the roof of his house and [illegible] the aid of powerful binoculars tell what people a long ways away in Central Park are saying to one another. And, of course, his young wife and the man who is paying her attentions wander within the circle of his lenses.

The denouement is the playwright's secret. Suffice it that all ends happily. It is a [illegible] which will interest most people [illegible] by the unusual character of the story. I think it is the first time in the history of the human triangle upon the stage that the husband has been so strangely supplied with information. Goodman's workmanship is not so remarkable as his theme.

Bowdoin Square.

"Three Weeks," the film production that captivated [illegible] Bowdoin Square Theatre last week is continued again this week at the request of many patrons. [illegible] is one of absorbing interest [illegible] shown in five parts. It deals with the career of a queen who [illegible] escape from the Palace and journeys to Switzerland, where she meets one Paul Verdayne, with whom she falls in love.

Orpheum Theatre.

A very pleasing show surrounded by high class vaudeville features was witnessed at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday. The head line feature was that popular team of comedians, Ashley and Canfield. A comedy playlet entitled "Her Name Was Dennie," also pleased. Others were the "Angelus," an operatic singing novelty. Canaris and Cleo presented a new magic specialty. The Wartenburg Brothers, who are new to Boston, offered a novelty foot juggling specialty. The thirteenth episode of the "Exploits of Elaine," entitled "The Devil Worshipers," was also shown.

Modern Theatre.

"The New Governor," a drama of the south, based on Edward Sheldon's piece "The Nigger," with William Farnum in the leading character, is the attraction this week at the new Modern Theatre. Alice Lazar is a dimpled dumpling of a darling. Or else she is a dimpled darling of a dumpling. And she certainly is the electric spark of the Honeymoon Burlesquers, now making things in the vicinity of the Gaiety Theatre merry and bright.

Alice with Nettie Nelsen, and Norma Bell are three of the most buxom and bewitching leading women ever displayed in the popular priced musical comedy.

The Honeymooners are a live lot. Phil Ott, the only comedian who can play a Dutchman without whiskers, is the [illegible] of the show, but he is closely seconded by Jim Rowland, who sings "If They'd Only Move Old Ireland Over Here."

You never can tell. If Parent shows class, well you know.

The bunch dopes it out that the team they'll have to beat this year is the White Sox. The White Sox are cleaning up the Pacific Coast and with Eddie Collins on second, why shouldn't they? But we've got a few boys that can take business with Mr. Collins. Tris Speaker for one. Say, well never mind.

I was telling you about Doc Green and what some of the bunch pulled off on him the other day.

Well, we were at dinner here and all of a sudden the Doc gives a yell and went right up in the air.

I says to myself, "Somebody's doped his soup," thinking they was trying some more funny stuff.

Then I see it was serious. The Doc jumped out of his chair and fell on the floor and begun to squirm and kick around, and he was yelling like a wild man.

Everybody jumped up and run over to see if they couldn't do something for him. No one knowed what was up. The Doc begun to holler, "I'm dying."

THOUGHT HE WAS POISONED.

Well, right there everybody made a break for the door to get a doctor. We was some scared bunch. The waiter turned green. He thought he'd poisoned the Doc and that we'd kill him.

Someone brought a glass of water. The Doc started to drink it and got his mouth full and then he spilled another of them yells and spurted the water out of his mouth all over the crowd and threw what was left in the glass up in the air and soaked two or three.

"The Rabbit's" Column

By Walter J. Maranville, SHORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES

MACON, Ga., March 23.—I believe that I will have a much better batting average for 1915 than I had last year. I hit pretty well in 1914, but I should be able to do even better work with the ... during the coming season. There is no reason why I should not be able to boost my average a few points as I have ... in my favor. The old time baseball "fan" used to contend that the big man always made the best ball player. This theory has been shattered during the past couple of years and the little man has now as good a chance to win a big league job as the raw-boned giant.

A large number of big, powerful ball players are great batters chiefly because they are blessed with muscles of iron and are able to drive the ball for a great distance when they hit it squarely. The pitchers, however, are able to put everything that they have on the ball when they are facing the husky batters. ... big fellows present an excellent mark to shoot at.

The same conditions do not prevail when a small man like myself is batting. The hurler ... has a difficult time getting ... over the plate. The trouble with most batters is that they are always anxious to smash at the ball and often aim at poor ... And if a good ball is pitched they very seldom hit it ... about the sixth or seventh inning and is liable to ... our fence busters start after him.

A pitcher has not an easy task when he has thrown ... bad balls to a batter of my size. If he is to get the sphere over the plate he must groove it across the rubber. He is obliged to throw a ball without much "stuff" on it. The batter then has a grand chance to smash out a safe blow.

Johnny Evers is one of the greatest ball players in the world when it comes to working a pitcher for a base on balls. I have yet to see the keystone king aim at a bad ball. He has of course done so when the hit and run was signalled or something like that, but he is not swinging at balls which are not over the plate when he is not in a position where he must hit the ball pitched at any cost.

This ... worries the pitcher. He realizes that he can not waste ... He knows that Evers will not ... bat from his shoulder unless the sphere cuts some part of the plate. Johnny usually gets the hurler ... with the result that he is forced to throw a ball without much "stuff" on it. The keystone king then ...

Let it be understood that alcohol is not the aim, but a mere incident, in brewing.

BREAD or ale, the twin products of fermentation are carbonic gas and alcohol. By no natural means can one be had without the other. But body, color, taste and aroma—not alcohol—are the tests of a fine ale.

Hence good brewing practice keeps alcohol at a minimum.

Braves Out to Repeat Win — Schmidts' Work Revelation

By JACK CONWAY.

MACON, Ga., March 23.—"This is another day, my brave lads," remarked Billy Smith, manager of the celebrated Atlanta baseball club, as he gathered his battered forces together today. "I have discovered that none of my noble band are missing," continued the courageous William in a sweet, musical tone, "therefore I know of no reason why some of us gallant ones should not be able to grab off a couple of iron crosses or Carnegie medals.

"We may not be world beaters when it comes to taking the offensive, but even the boys in the press box have got to admit that we are there in more ways than one when it comes to assimilating punishment. So at them, my stalwart warriors, and let me see what you can do today."

ATLANTA GETS ANOTHER CHANCE TODAY.

This is the proper place to drop the curtain. William made a few more remarks, but we cannot repeat them here, as this is a family newspaper. Be it known that the honorable Mr. Smith is considered quite a baseball wizard in these climes and that he had hopes of handing a few setbacks to the Braves.

The two teams engaged in a seven-inning tussle here yesterday and when the final shot had been fired the Braves were on the long end of a 13 to 5 score. They completely outclassed their opponents and breezed across the finish line without extending themselves.

Atlanta will receive an opportunity to win back some of its lost prestige today. This is what our friend Mr. Smith was trying to impress upon his able-bodied crew as he gave them the up and down today. He was anxious for them to know that they still had a chance to be hailed as national heroes.

James and Tyler Picked to Pitch.

The esteemed boss of the Atlanta outfit is a very charming gentleman. He is courteous and brave and we think a whole lot of him. But when it comes to giving his team even an outside chance against the Braves, well, we have written a little fiction during our career on this little old planet, but we have never gone quite that far.

Atlanta might be able to vanquish the Braves if the teams kept playing every day for a decade. But the young men who represented Atlanta on the diamond yesterday would never be able to dispose of Stallings' gang unless the champions decided to perform a little act of charity and present them with a ball game.

The chances of Atlanta winning today's tussle are not very bright, as Boss Stallings intimated to your humble servant that he was planning to use Bill James and "Lefty" Tyler in the box. Both of these famous hurlers are in grand condition for so early in the campaign and possess enough class to hand the Atlanta athletes a few severe jolts.

Yes, gentle reader, it looks as though Mr. Smith's little piece of oratory was all in vain. 'Tis indeed a cruel, cold world, mates.

'Dutch' Schmidt's Work Proves a Revelation.

We do not know who is going to pitch for Atlanta and do not believe that it will make much difference. The Braves are all pitching which they have been busting them a mile. Stallings does not know whether his men are all going to be .300 hitters this year or to attribute their terrific batting to the class of up against so far this spring.

"Dutch" Schmidt is batting in July form already. It is a treat to watch the Baltimore youth smash the sphere to the distant corners of the ball yard. He was there with bells on in yesterday's combat and connected for three clean hits in four trips to the plate, which is a pretty good average for any young athlete.

"Dutch" is also showing big bunches of well known "pep" around the initial sack, and it reminds us of the hectic National League race of 1914 when he is picking them out of the dirt and pulling down high ones with the skill and grace of one Harold Chase, first baseman extraordinary.

Braves' First Sacker in for a Big Year.

Stallins takes an intense amount of pleasure in watching Schmidt perform. Charley is one of the original Stallings' men. The "Big Chief" secured Schmidt from the Buffalo club of the International League and placed him on first base, much to the disgust of the wise men.

The Braves' boss then sidetracked "Hap" Myers. The latter was one of the fastest men in the big leagues, but Stallings asserted that Schmidt would develop into a better ball player than Myers ever thought of being.

Schmidt was slow and awkward at first, but Stallings' prediction has finally come true and the Baltimore butcher is today rated as one of the best first basemen in the game. He did not receive much credit from the sporting writers and "fans" throughout the country last season, but he is certain to come in for his own during the coming campaign, as his playing here in the South has been a revelation even to Stallings.

Stallings Is Sweet on Little Dick Crutcher.

Schmidt is also a hard loser, and this has made him a big favorite with the gang. He is out to win each ball game in which he engages, and as a result he is playing at top speed all of the time.

But back to the well known Atlanta warriors. Stallings may use one of his young pitchers in part of today's contest with Atlanta. The "Big Chief" is very sweet on Dick Crutcher and he may allow the little fellow to perform on the mound. Crutcher has shown up to advantage while here and should be of considerable help to James, Tyler and Rudolph this year.

Wiltse, ex-Giant, to Lead Jersey City

NEW YORK, Mark 23.—President Edward J. Barrow of the International League announced today that he had signed George Wiltse, formerly of the New York Nationals, to manage the Jersey City team for the coming season.

JOHNSON OBJECTS TO N. Y. REFEREE

HAVANA, Cuba., March 23.—Jack Johnson and Jess Willard are today trying to decide upon a man to act as referee for their twenty-round battle, to be held here April 4. Billy Roche, Charlie White, Sam Austin and several other prominent New Yorkers have been mentioned and are all agreeable to Tom Jones and Willard, but Jack Johnson is fighting shy of a New York man.

This state of affairs has revived the name of Matt Hinkel of Cleveland, who was mentioned when the fight was originally scheduled for Juarez.

Congressman Jose d'Estrampes, chairman of the citizens' committee working in conjunction with the promoters of the Willard-Johnson battles, scheduled for Havana on April 4, has received positive assurances from President Monocal that the executive officers of the republic of Cuba are in favor of the Johnson-Willard fight.

"I talked with the President in his private offices," says Colonel Estrampes. "As a congressman you are free to quote me as saying that the President is in favor of the fight and will not let anything interfere with holding it. He will attend the fight at the race track with his family and members of his Cabinet, and moreover, will buy his seats, and not be guests of the management."

President Monocal has visited both Willard and Johnson in their training quarters, and after looking the pair over, still wants to bet on Johnson. The President made a bet of $100 on Johnson, when he saw the champion training the first day. This was before Willard arrived. After Joe put in an appearance, however, the President watched him working, thinking he might want to change his betting tactics. He still remains, however, a firm believer in Johnson winning the battle, believing the negro to be too fast for the young white man.

Clabby Proves Too Clever for Chip

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., March 23.—In a bout of six rounds here Jimmy Clabby of Hammond, Ind., claimant of the middleweight championship, outboxed George Chip of Newcastle, Penn., nearly all the way. Three rounds went to Clabby, and Chip could lay claim to but one.

For four rounds Chip scarcely laid a glove on Clabby, who showed wonderful footwork and dodging ability.

Boston College High seems due to repeat its great baseball performance of last year. There are over fifty candidates out and all are promising. Bob Gill and Captain Jim Splane will be the leading battery.

Bunnie Partridge has been elected manager of the Roxbury Latin baseball team. Over twenty boys are trying for positions on the nine. Work is being directed by Coach Evans. Wilsch, Billings and Johnson appear the best of the pitching candidates.

WORCESTER COACH QUITS AFTER ROW

WORCESTER, March 23.—Coach Vaughn F. Blanchard of the Worcester Academy track team has resigned from his position as a result of the controversy that followed the recent B. A. A. schoolboy games which resulted in the victory being taken away from the local school because three of the athletes competing were over the age limit.

Clarence Shay and "Brainey" Bower, the Arlington boy, two of the boys that were over age, have been requested to leave school. A resolution was passed re-instating Tony Doyle, as the athletic council believes he was truthful when he stated he did not think he has passed the age limit stipulated for the B. A. A. games.

Protest Ban on Refreshments in Big Marathon

Boston is strongly opposed to the proposed A. A. U. rude prohibiting competitors in future Marathon races from receiving any form of refreshment or having attendants. If this regulation is carried out it will have to be used in the B. A. A. race on April 19.

The prime movers in the local opposition are E. E. Babb, a member of the A. A. U. board of governors, Colonel Billings of the B. A. A. and Dr. John H. Cunningham, Jr., who has examined athletes in the last fifteen Marathons held under the auspices of the B. A. A.

"Any Marathon race is enough of a strain," said Dr. Cunningham, "but when you impose a rule which prohibits a contestant from moistening a parched throat, you are imposing something which ought to keep everyone out of the race. Such a measure is absolutely absurd.

COLONIAL WINS BOWLING TITLE

Colonial rolled 1705 in its wind-up match.

Setting The Pace

For years New England has been buying Beer from all parts of the world. Not because as good beer as the world produced could not be brewed here, but because it was not.

Fenway
The Beer Without a Substitute

Has blazed the way, it sets the pace for New England by coming into the field with a home product, not just as good, but the best beer ever sold here.

This statement is based on the fundamentals of brewing, malt, hops and water. CHOICE MALT and SAAZER KREIS BOHEMIAN HOPS are the best materials in the world for brewing, and are used in both Fenway Ale and Lager. To give it a perfect body not one ounce of any other than choice malt is used and only that which is pronounced by the country's best known experts to be the highest quality.

The water used in Fenway comes from our own driven wells and is unsurpassed in brewing qualities.

Our motto "The Best Is None Too Good for Fenway," is giving Boston a brew to be proud of, a brew of quality and purity, and a boon to good health.

'L' STIRS MEETING HOUSE HILL FOLK

A mass meeting of the residents of the Meeting House Hill section of Dorchester to protest against the Elevated Company's service in the district will be held Thursday night in Hamilton Hall, under the auspices of the Meeting House Hill Improvement Association.

The meeting is the result of the company's proposal to discontinue all direct South Station cars from the section on April 3.

At the meeting it is proposed to have drawn up resolutions condemning the present car service and asking for a hearing before the Public Service Commission.

Patrick H. McCue, a business man and a member of the transportation committee of the improvement association, said today:

"We have repeatedly tried to secure better service for the Meeting House Hill section, without success. The proposal to remove the South Station car service is the last straw. We are now determined to bring the matter before the Public Service Commission.

"The present car service is inadequate for the needs of the district, let alone reducing the service. The fact is, we have today four less cars than we had fifteen years ago, though the population of the district has increased 130 per cent."

Wants Lawrence 'Dry' for 6 Years

MOTOR NOTES

By J. C. KERRISON.

E. A. Williams, Jr., president of the Garford Motor Truck Company, and R. E. Taylor, president of the R. E. Taylor Corporation, Eastern distributors of Garford trucks, paid a visit to the local branch yesterday morning. Both gentlemen recently made an extensive tour throughout the Eastern section of the country, during which they were much impressed with the general tendency towards an increase in business confidence. Mr. Williams closed his trip around the East with his visit to Boston, leaving here yesterday noon for the factory at Lima, Ohio.

"Business men are rapidly waking up to the fact that the economical methods of yesterday are the most expensive methods of today," said Mr. Williams, "and while horses used to be economical they are now a decided and wasteful overhead expense. Motor trucks are recognized as time saving successors of the horses, they having proven their ability to get there and back quicker, to be certain under all conditions, to be infinitely more economical, to be able to work twenty-four hours a day and to be in the pink of working condition day after day, month after month, indefinitely and this is the reason for the more general increase in the purchase of motor trucks."

His company, said he, is working full force endeavoring to catch up with the business transacted by such concerns as the R. E. Taylor Corporation.

On Saturday evening next a farewell dinner will be given at the Columbia Club in Indianapolis to J. I. Handley, president of the Marion and Mutual Motors Companies, who by reason of a desire to more closely assemble his business interests is leaving Indianapolis to locate in Jackson Michigan.

"Skinny" Sizes Up the Fair — Fruit Show Catches Him

By SKINNY SHANER.
Per
Tom McNamara.

There's nothin' like sistem. I'm gonna go rite thru the fair from one end to the other and spout about the bildings each after each, and also about what is in them. That's the kinda gink I are, see if I ain't.

All rite, here goes. I went all thru the California bilding yesterday. My friend "Winkie" he started thru with me, but he had to quit; he said he got complekely to hungrie from seein' all the fruit which was inside of glass cases and in boxes, with glass tops on end everie thing like that, also he tried to jar loose a orange outa a big pile of them which was standin' on a table, but a gentleman catched him and gived him a kick right in the act. Gosh, a reporter feller like me has a hard life. I'll bet I was as hungrie as "Winkie," only I couldn't beat it. I had to stick on the job, no matter what happened.

Well, sor; of all the swell stuff to eat which I ever seen I gess the California bilding has the best ever inside of it. Gosh, how I woulda liked to tear into one of them watermellens! Jimminy, what I coulda did to some of them swell prunes! Golly, let's lay offa this idea for a while; I'm gettin' too hungrie to write; no kiddin'.

HOUSE MADE FROM TREE.

I'll tellya what made a hit with me—the house made out of a piece of tree from Humboldt County. It's about so high as if I standed on my head about fifteen times. No, I don't mean that; I mean supposin' about fifteen ginks about as high as me would stand on each other's heads—that's as high as the ceiling is. Now, do you get me? And, besides that, it's round, just like a tree, only it's layin' down on the ground instead of standin' up, and all the stuffin' is scooped out of it, and there's a door in each end, and you can walk thru and—(wait a minit; I wanna read over what I writed to see if I know what it's all about myself)—I refuse to answer. You just gotta go and see for yourself; that's the best way. Then there will be no argument.

Gee, you'd oughta saw them violets from San Mateo County! By gum, talk about pretty? Oh, mamma, I'll bet there was sixteen billion seven hundred and sixty-five million nine thousand and six of them. The only way you can prove that I'm wrong is to go and count 'em yourself. You oughta saw all the ladies hangin' around them violets. They was just like bees. I gess that's no josh about ladies liking violets at that, huh?

BUILDING A LOLLYPALOOSA.

From the outside, where my frend "Winkie" stayed most of the time, the California bilding is a lollypaloosa of a looker. It has little bells hangin' on it and beautiful arches and things like that. I don't care who knows it, I'm sticked on that there California bilding; so there you are. There's a nutshell full.

After I getted thru nosin' thru the California bilding I came out and looked for "Winkie" all over, but I could not find him any place until I happened to be marchin' along the Zone and I seen him tryin' to sneek into the Wild West Show past the ticket man. I went up to him and telled him I would take him in on my pass, but he said "Nix; anybody can get in on a pass; that's too easy. Im gonna sneak in." I said, "I'm with you" then, because we is pals, and he said "all rite." Then we started to sneekin'. We sneeked till time to go home, but we couldn't sneek far enuf to get in.

That's all fer today. In a few more days I'll pull some more junk. Look out!

REPORT COE TRAIL IN NORTH DAKOTA

Henry Clarke Coe, Jr., the young Standard Oil salesman, who disappeared from his home at No. 1,200 Commonwealth avenue, Allston, on January 30, was in Minot, N. D., a week ago, according to the announcement of the Boston detective agency which has conducted the long search for him.

Employes of the agency, who are trailing Coe by the fact he is peddling weather strips to support himself, as he apparently makes his way for the ranch where he spent some time in his youth, expect to have no difficulty in having him hurry back to Boston, when they tell him of the daughter born to Mrs. Coe on Saturday.

New York dispatches today tell of the receipt by Coe's mother, who lives there, of a telegram from the Boston detectives giving an encouraging report on the hunt for Coe.

The Minot clew led to the fact that the man the detectives are sure is Coe had left for the town of Donnybrook, thirty miles away, and not reached by railroad or telegraph. Boyhood friends in that section have been wired to watch for his arrival and to notify his brother in New York.

It is now clear to the detectives that Coe on the day of his disappearance made his way north from the Boston & Maine terminal. His first stop was in Fitchburg. Thence he apparently went to Essex Junction, Vt., close to the Canadian border.

Montreal gave the next clew. About this time Coe, it is declared, began to peddle weather strips. From town to town he was followed, always with this article for sale. In Landford, N. D., the detective was but a few hours behind him.

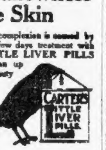

The fact that Coe is selling this weather strip tends to indicate his trip was premeditated. In his home was found a copy of a commercial traveler organ on which he had written the name of the firm making the line of goods he is now selling.

SUNDAY TO WORK ONLY IN BIG CITIES

PITTSBURGH, March 23.—Billy Sunday, the evangelist, bound back today to Winona Lake, Ind., to rest for his coming work in Paterson, N. J., plans to devote all his time to the big cities.

"I'm not so worn as I expected to be after Philadelphia," he said. "I have been working hard, and Paterson will carry me into May. Then ma and I plan to take a sailing vessel and voyage through the Panama Canal to San Francisco. We hope to spend some time at the Panama Pacific Exposition. Afterward we will go to our apple orchard at Hood River, Oregon."

Meanwhile, the big cities are inviting him from every quarter, Sunday says. Next Fall he begins work in Omaha. From there he will go to Syracuse, to Trenton, to Baltimore, to Louisville and in the Fall of 1916 to Boston.

Among the cities whose invitations "Billy" has not yet accepted are: Minneapolis, St. Paul, Duluth, Detroit, New Orleans, Los Angeles, Richmond, Va., Roanoke, Va., Chattanooga, Washington and Buffalo.

Good Character of Georgia and Its Governor

Hon. William Randolph Hearst, San Francisco, California:

Georgia bonds sold practically on basis of New York bonds. In behalf of Georgia I thank you for the invaluable aid of your newspapers and magazines in contributing to this result. JOHN M. SLATON, Governor.

The State of Georgia has good reason to felicitate itself in being able to sell its bonds in open market at this period upon the same basis as the bonds of the State of New York are sold. It is an achievement that speaks volumes in indorsement of the credit resources and government of the State.

And it is an exceptionally pleasing assurance to receive from the Governor of Georgia that the Hearst newspapers and magazines have been able to contribute in any material way to the financing of the famous Southern Commonwealth.

In a larger sense it is Georgia herself and Georgia alone that has won the distinguished recognition from the great money centres of the country. Georgia has carved out of the hard conditions of the Civil War the title of the most progressive of Southern Commonwealths. The energy, courage and thrift of its brave and intelligent people made Georgia the first of the Southern States to recover from the desolation of the Civil War and to lay the foundation for the prosperity and repute which stands it in such good stead today. There has always been a forward spirit in Georgia—in politics and in business, and her beautiful and brilliant capital, Atlanta, has long been recognized as the leader in the social, political and business regeneration of the South.

Georgia today leads all Southern States in agricultural progress, shares with South Carolina in the keen competition with New England for supremacy in mills and manufactures and has just recently covered herself with glory in the enactment of a wise and humane child labor law.

But it is in fundamentally wise direction of the State's finances and resources that statesmanship has given to Georgia the good name which sold its bonds so advantageously in the metropolis of the country.

Georgia has been fortunate in having at this time a chief executive so wise and capable as Governor John Marshall Slaton.

Trained to public life through successive and successful years of service, Governor Slaton has consecrated himself with rare devotion and exceptional courage to the affairs of the Commonwealth. He has not hesitated to antagonize public opinion at times in the prosecution of his well matured convictions of a sound public policy. His unflinching advocacy of the equalization of the taxes of the State against a wave of demagogic clamor has been vindicated fully in results and in the approval of the people and has borne its essential part in the financial success of the Commonwealth in New York.

The sale of the Georgia bonds is the latest and perhaps most conspicuous triumph of the discretion and persistent energy of its able governor.

It has been a genuine pleasure to lend the influence of the Hearst publications in co-operation with this laudable movement on the part of a great Southern State and of a devoted and patriotic chief executive.

The unlimited future of the South and the established leadership of Atlanta among Southern cities have induced the Hearst publications to plant in Atlanta one of the essential links in its great chain of public journals stretching over the country.

The vigorous existence of the Atlanta Georgian is the definite and continuing pledge to the people of Georgia that the strength of the entire chain is girt about the interests and prosperity of that city and section, just as it has been about the other cities and sections in which the publications have given hostages to fortune and the pledge of a hearty helpfulness in every wholesome movement that enveloped their welfare and repute.

As an Engine of Destruction the Flying Machine Has Proved a Failure

There has been another airship raid on Paris, this time by Zeppelins.

Nearly half a hundred bombs were dropped. No one was killed, although an aged woman is said to have died from fright, and only a few persons were injured. But little damage was done.

There can be no question that aeroplanes, and perhaps even dirigible balloons, will prove a great blessing to civilization.

It is certain that thus far they have failed utterly as war machines.

After the Wright brothers had made their first successful flight the war departments of every great power eagerly hailed the aeroplane as the most important agency of destruction that had ever been invented.

European countries sent for the Wrights, paid them high prices for machines, and secured their services in teaching the art of aviation to their army officers.

Europeans, particularly the English and French, built and improved aeroplanes on their own account.

Big prizes were offered for flights with more than one passenger and flights with heavy loads, the purpose being to develop a machine that could carry marksmen or high explosives for use in warfare.

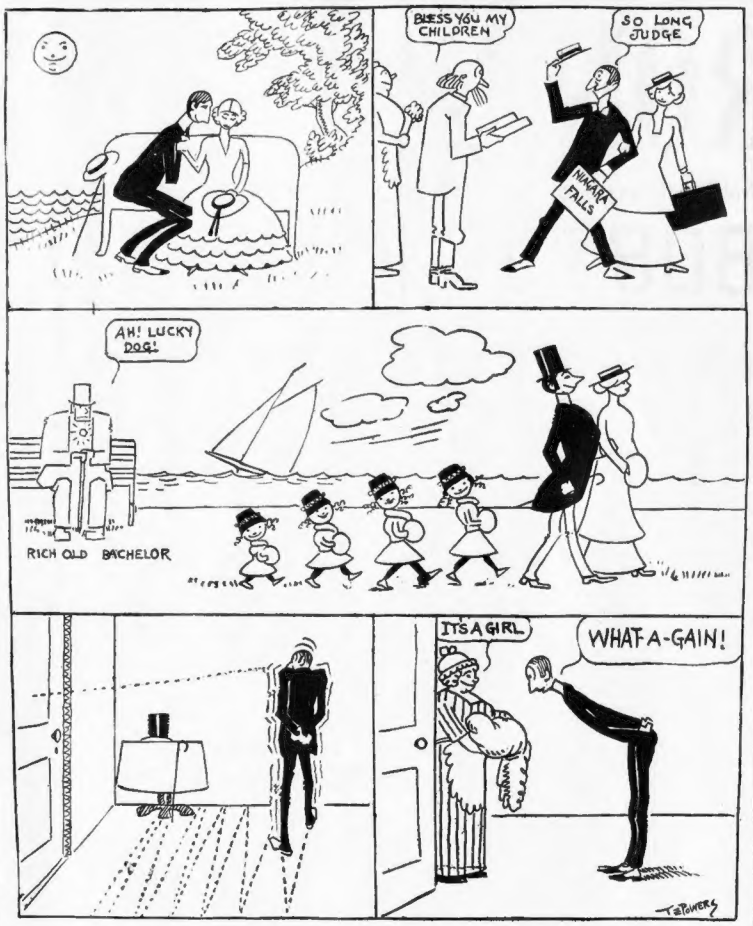

The whole development of the flying machine was with the

What—again? Yes, this is the first of a new series by T. E. Powers, whose drawings are as full of fun as a Zeppelin is of gas. Laugh over this one, and when you see the next you'll say, "What—again?" Yes, you'll laugh at them again and again and again.

"Words! Words!"

By ELBERT HUBBARD

IDEAL in words. And words are arrangements by which twenty-six little arbitrary signs and seven punctuation marks express thoughts.

"Words! words! words!" said Hamlet in scorn of the habit of using words with no thought back of them.

And a little later we read, "What's in a name?"

A name is a word used to designate a person or thing. And no one knew better than Shakespeare that words cast a purple shadow. They uplift or they depress. Words stab, sting, injure, grieve, wound. Or they may inspire and stimulate.

Words are expressions of thoughts, and when a word no longer fits we usually change it and get a new one.

* * *

The State of Connecticut recently in its State Legislature has ordered that the word "convict" be stricken from the official record, and instead the word "inmate" be used as applied to a prisoner, the argument being that we have no right to apply a lasting word of opprobrium to a human being, no matter how much he has erred.

A hundred years ago the word "madhouse" was used in England in an official way. Little Elizabeth Fry, mother of nine, used her influence against the further use of that word, "madhouse."

She said: "These people are not mad; they are sick. They are not possessed by devils; they are unfortunate people who need our sympathy, our kindness, care, our love."

And through her influence the word "madhouse" was replaced by the word "asylum," meaning a place of rest and refuge.

Now the word "asylum" has gotten a taint upon it, and we have changed the word in most of the States to "hospital." We no longer talk about insane asylums; we talk about State hospitals.

And in many instances the word "hospital" is no longer used, because it implies a violation of the laws of nature on the part of the inmate, and instead we use the word "sanitarium," a place where sanitation reigns supreme.

Not long ago a man in America who knows the lure of words suggested that instead of talking about a "War Department" at Washington we should speak of the "Peace Department." Instead of having a Secretary of War we should have a Secretary of Peace.

The object of the United States Army is not to make war; it is to insure peace. The idea of aggression or the invasion of another country by an American army is unthinkable.

Our army is for protection, and for no other purpose.

It is not for us to leave our country to attack another.

The so-called "War Department" is under the direction of peaceful men, and as their chief solicitude is peace their department should be accordingly called "The Peace Department."

Our army should be an army of peace, and everywhere in the official records where we use the word "war" let it be stricken out, if possible, and the word "peace" used.

Let war be anathema as applied to America, Americans and American institutions.

Here is a place where psychology plays a big part; and the iteration and reiteration of the word "peace" must and will have an effect on the minds of the people, tending to make war abhorrent and peace glorious.

When war ceases to be heroic war will cease; but so long as we glorify war in literature, on the stage and in our daily talk war will endure.

Universal peace will come when universal peace exists as a sentiment in the hearts of the people.

The first thing to do is for Congress to change the name "Secretary of War" to "Secretary of Peace" and the rest will follow as a natural consequence. Just as did little Elizabeth Fry's suggestion that the word "madhouse" be replaced by the word "asylum."

Burglar got away with thirty Brooklyn pies. What did he do—drill them?

London—Lady Randolph Churchill has hired "war maids" to take the place of her male servants, who have enlisted for the war. The "war maids" perform all the duties of the butler and the footman. They are dressed in a uniform the upper part of which resembles a footman's and the lower a parlor maid's.

Which extinguishes the glory of the London footman—his calves.

THE STARS

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

YOU look at the stars on a calm, clear night;
And they seem like a million points of light;
Then you stop, attracted by laughter gay,
And look at the lights of a fine cafe.

Did you ever look at the stars and think
Of the anguished eyes that have seen them wink?
The eyes of a maid who had listened to lies,
The eyes of a drunkard who could not rise,
The eyes of a convict let away
To his ghastly home with its walls of gray,
The tired eyes of a rich man's toy,
The eyes of a starved and beaten boy?
Sick of looking at life's grim scars
These are the eyes that look at the stars.

Dorothy Dix on "Women's Lack of Humor"

Too Bad They Cannot See Funny Side of Drunken Husband or Regard Beating as Playful Jest. Everything Depends on Point of View

By DOROTHY DIX

TO everyone who takes an altruistic interest in the feminine sex it is bound to be a matter of profound regret that women have so little sense of humor. They miss such a good joke in not being able to see themselves.

What else, for instance, has ever been so sardonically humorous as the spectacle presented by the suffragettes of starving themselves to death to spite a government that wouldn't give them the vote?

Or what could be more amusing than woman's idea of enjoying herself at her club by sitting up and listening to a deathly dull essay on the "Ancient Byzantine Empire," that some sister clubwoman has dug out of the encyclopedia?

And isn't it a scream that the majority of middle-aged wives are actually going through all sorts of torturing exercises, and enduring starvation diets in order to keep themselves thin and lithe to retain the affection of fat, bald, rheumatic, bay windowed husbands?

These and a hundred other feminine peculiarities—to say nothing of the spectacle of a stout lady in the present style high water skirt—add to the gaiety of nations, and it is heartbreaking to reflect that the poor dears, who furnish so much amusement to others, miss the joke themselves.

It is, therefore, gratifying to notice that the feminine bump of humor is beginning to grow, and that lovely woman is at last coming to the place where she can enjoy a joke on herself, which is, as every one will agree, the acid test of genuine appreciation of fun.

The proof of this is furnished by a lady who recently had her husband arrested after he had beaten her every day for a week until she was battered and blue and had both eyes bunged up.

At the trial, however, she withdrew her charge of assault and battery, stating, in explanation of her change of position, that she had found out that her husband was merely whipping her for fun, and to prove to a friend with whom he had made a wager that he could beat her every day for a month. "Had I known that at the time," added the humor-loving wife, "I should not have had him arrested, but would have helped him to win his bet, but the mixup came through his not having let me in on the joke!"

Of course, many husbands complain that their wives do not catch the point of their witticisms, and so the wife who can take a drubbing as a playful bit of repartee will certainly do much toward making matrimony a merry jest. This new attitude of women should be hailed with rapture, for there is no doubt that it will do more than anything else to lessen the domestic tension and change life from a tragedy into a farce comedy.

Everything depends on the point of view, and if women can only learn to look at matrimonial contretemps humorously instead of pessimistically their happiness and peace of mind are assured. For example, take the very common case of the husband who stays out at night with the boys, and comes home gloriously tanked up.

Very few wives have ever seen anything in that situation except tears and anguish. Yet on the stage the maudlin fellow with his hat smashed in, his collar off, who staggers around from one side to the other, is considered so excruciatingly amusing that he gets round after round of applause.

If women's sense of humor has reached the point where they can see a joke in a beating, may we not anticipate the day when the drunkard's wife will joyously wait up for her spouse's return for the purpose of laughing at his funny efforts to find the key hole, and thus one of the common sorrows of life be eliminated?

How much, too, it would do to brighten life if wives could only learn to regard their husbands' remarks about the household bills as mere facetiousness! It is, really, when you come to think of it, absurdly funny, for a man to ask his wife what she did with that quarter he gave her week before last, or to expect her to keep house on air, and it's nothing but women's lack of the sense of humor that has prevented them from enjoying these domestic jokes.

Certainly, if every man were court jester to his wife, and she regarded his criticism on her housekeeping and his flings at her lack of management, and her general vanity, and weaknesses as an amusing monologue, delivered for her special regaling, she would save herself many a pang she now suffers. It is better to laugh than to cry, and to have your funny bone tickled than it is to have your feelings hurt.

And think of the hilarious time women could have if, instead of being worried into their graves by their Noras, and Hildas, and Dinahs, and their in-laws, they could see that the servant problem and the mother-in-law question are funny instead of tragical, and that in wrestling with them they are being permitted to dip into two of the perennial fountains of humor. Likewise, that when their children are bad and mischievous they should laugh with them, as with the Katzenjammer Kids in private life.

In all good truth, women have always taken themselves too seriously, and an appreciation of humor would save them much trouble. And it would prevent them from making fools of themselves so many, many times.

As an Engine of Destruction the Flying Machine Has Proved a Failure

purpose of making it a war machine—a messenger of death which should be more effective and more terrible than anything which had ever been devised.

All the experimenting with aeroplanes was turned over to the war departments. Aeroplane guns were invented. Explosives were made for use in bombs to be dropped from high levels on armies or fortifications.

The opportunity to test to the utmost the value of the flying machine as a destroying agency came with the war.

And the result has proved that their evolution as war machines was a mistake—a mistake which has held back for years their evolution as agencies of progress and locomotion.

For reconnoissance the monoplanes and biplanes, easily got into the air and capable of very high speed, have proved of great service.

But only an occasional lucky shot has enabled them to tell in a battle or to have any real influence in the fortunes of a campaign.

Flying at so great a height, the operators of the machines have found it wholly impossible to drop bombs with any accuracy, either on hostile ships, hostile armies or hostile fortifications.

The flying machine, developed for the carrying of messages and of passengers, and even of lighter freights, is bound to prove of great use to humanity.

The time is sure to come when it will replace all methods of transit at very high speed, when it will shorten the distance between cities, and overcome the perils of the ocean.

But its future development must be on useful commercial lines.

As a death machine it is a failure, and it is fortunate for the world that this is true.
